More U.S. Grain Sold

YORK (AP) — The third major U.S.-Soviet grain deal of 1975 was announced Monday as Continental Grain Co. announced completion of an agreement to sell 5.6 million metric tons of corn and barley to Russia for more than $600 million.

Two other grain exporters announced last week that they had sold 3.2 million metric tons of wheat to the Soviet Union, a move that brought some criticism in Congress and from longshoremen who are considering refusing to load the grain for shipment.

Agriculture Department sources repeatedly have said that they do not expect the sales to result in the kind of soaring prices that followed the billion-dollar 1972 U.S.-Soviet deal involving 19 million metric tons of grain. They say the United States expects record harvests this year and can afford the exports.

The sales price of the 4.5 million metric tons of corn and 1.1 million metric tons of barley involved in Monday's deal was not announced, but a Continental spokesman said the transaction was worth more than $600 million. At prevailing export rates, the corn deal would be worth $540 million and the barley shipment $100 million.

Agriculture Department spokesmen in Washington confirmed that the corn and barley sale had taken place. A spokesman said he understood that the exporter was Continental, but could not confirm the fact.

A Continental spokesman said the grain would be shipped starting with the new harvest in October. He said the shipment would probably continue through next August.

The grain could come from any part of the company's international operations, the spokesman said, but added: "We are hoping that the corn can largely originate in this country."

The Agriculture Department said the sale was reported as an "all origins" contract, meaning the grain may come from a country selected by the exporter.

American farmers are expecting record harvests this year of 153.6 million metric tons of corn — up 30 per cent from last year's weather-damaged total — and 59.5 million metric tons of wheat.

That would be equal to about six billion bushels of corn and 2.2 billion bushels of wheat.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz has said Americans will use about 800 million bushels of wheat for domestic consumption, leaving 1.4 billion bushels for export and to build up depleted stockpiles.

USDA officials have said that the Soviet Union, hard hit by bad weather in its grain belt, may buy up to 10 million metric tons of grain this year from all sources. Other industry experts say the total could be 15 million tons or more.

The Canadian Wheat Board announced last Thursday that the Soviets had bought two million long tons (slightly more than two million metric tons) of wheat from Canada, with shipment scheduled to start in the fall.

The Canadian announcement followed USDA confirmation that Cook Industries Inc. of Memphis, Tenn., had completed an arrangement for the sale of two million metric tons of wheat to Russia and Cargill Inc. of Minneapolis had sold 1.2 million metric tons of wheat to the Soviets.

The USDA estimated last week that this year's Soviet harvest would be 195 million metric tons and department sources said Friday that crop prospects had deteriorated still further to 190 million and possibly even 185 million metric tons.

A 185-million-ton harvest would be the smallest Soviet crop since 1972 when the secret, controversial deal between the Americans and the Russians caused wheat prices to rise from under $2 a bushel to over $6 a bushel and contributed to increased domestic food prices.

The longshoremen, meeting in Miami Beach, will consider a resolution later this week calling on the 132,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association to refuse to load the 3.2 million metric tons of wheat for shipment to the Soviet Union.

ILA President Thomas W. Gleason said he expected the resolution to pass. "We want to look into the grain sale," he said. "Even if there is enough grain to feed Americans, we want to know there will be enough grain to feed our cattle."

AFL-CIO President George Meany offered conditional approval of the longshoremen's move. "Why should we sell them wheat at all? This is an act of cooperation to help them out. But I'd like to see a two-way street."

Council Reaffirms Opposition To 48th, Holdrege Widenings

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writers

City lawmakers took an even stronger stand Monday against the proposed widenings of 48th and Holdrege Sts. than they took last week. The council members said they don't want those streets widened now, or in the future.

Last week the council indicated it would keep the door open for widening to be considered as one of the alternatives to handling traffic on 48th and Holdrege.

Councilman Bob Jeambey said last week's action was ambiguous since it wasn't clear if the council would approve the street widenings if they were proposed once again. So, Jeambey and the council decided to shut that ambiguous door and say "no widenings, period."

'Plain and Simple'

And while the council said their intent was "plain and simple," Public Works Director Bob Obering's interpretation of the council's action wasn't.

Obering said by rejecting the planning study reports, which outline the widening plans, the council would be creating problems if the city ever wanted to do anything with 48th or Holdrege.

Since the projects are listed with the federal government and state, the city would have to go through the whole process to get any new projects listed. Additionally, Obering said the city could lose a chance to be reimbursed by the federal government for engineering work already done by the city on those projects.

Jeambey argued that the council was clear in saying "don't widen it" and told Obering "you're trying to keep it alive."

Vote Unanimous

The council unanimously rejected the widening plans to turn 48th from M to Newton and from Newton to Bancroft and Holdrege from 28th to 48th into four-lane, median divided streets.

The lawmakers approved the planning study reports for three proposed intersection improvements, one of which is opposed by residents of University Place.

The council approved the improvement of 48th and Leighton Ave. only after Jeambey switched his "no" vote to "yes" in order for the resolution to receive a majority vote.

In the tie vote, Max Denney and Sue Bailey joined Jeambey in voting no, while council members Dick Baker, Steve Cook and Bob Sikyta voted yes. John Robinson is out of town.

Residents Opposed

Residents of the area again told the council Monday they oppose the plans to reconstruct the intersection, which includes the construction of a median.

The council still will be able to consider alternatives such as using painted medians instead of concrete ones, later on in the planning process. The council can also reject the entire plans later on.

Other improvements approved are for 48th and Pioneers Blvd. and 20th and Cornhusker Hwy, both improvements which Obering said are needed to improve safety rather than east traffic congestion.

Mrs. Bailey attempted, but failed, to convince her colleagues that action approving the intersection plans was inconsistent with their previous action rejecting the street widenings. The difference, she said, was only a matter of degree and cost.

Policy Urged

Throughout the street widening discussions Mrs. Bailey has been urging the council to develop an overall policy dealing with the community's transportation problems.

Such a policy may be written as an outgrowth of a series of meetings the council agreed to set up in September to develop a city energy policy. Mrs. Bailey and Sikyta will work with Mayor Helen Boosalis in setting up those workshops, suggested by Mrs. Bailey.

Volunteers Devote Summer To Beatrice Home Patients

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — "All it takes is a hug or a little pat on the head and it makes the day for one of these kids."

Sally Yelkin and Trish Griffith, upcoming seniors at Lincoln Southeast, are two of the high schoolers applying those "little pats" at the Beatrice State Home this summer. They're among 17 Youth Service Corps volunteers giving from four to eight weeks of their vacation to the mentally retarded.

Members of Sheridan Lutheran Church, the two are joined by six fellow Lutherans from Kansas, Colorado, Missouri and Florida. Two other inter-state groups, comprised of six Mennonite teenagers and three Methodists, make up the rest of the ecumenical project.

"Mennonites started the sessions eight years ago but this is the first time different denominations have had kids here together," said Willa Mae Ray, BSH director of special services. "The program is very worthwhile. Besides the extra attention the residents receive, the volunteers themselves gain through increased understanding of the retarded."

If Sally and Trish are typical, the home's youngsters are indeed benefited. Besides putting in their full day in a variety of activities, the classmates asked to help spoon-feed some of their more helpless charges.

"I was hesitant at first about the feeding as well as some of the other things," said Sally. "But it wasn't long until I wasn't even thinking of the kids as retarded. Just like normal children, every one is different and has his own personality."

Trish, considering special education as a career even before she signed up for the summer, said she has now been won over completely.

"What's really neat is the way everybody here is so happy," she commented. "That surprised me and I've also been impressed by how much freedom the residents are given. And it's wonderful how dedicated the regular employees seem to be."

Besides having aide assignments in such fields as physical therapy, classroom teaching and Bible school, each of the volunteers spends an hour a day with one child. Thus they get to observe the progress of this "special friend" throughout the summer.

All the Mennonite volunteers are from other states. The three Methodists, who were present for only four weeks, were all Nebraskans: Ann Bufington of Lincoln, Kris Anderson of Wayne and Karen Konopik of Omaha.

Fieldhouse Work Still Going Slow

Striking union members crippled construction of the University of Nebraska Fieldhouse for more than a month and the project is apparently still limping.

Harley Schrader, director of the university's physical plant, said Monday that the project is moving ahead — but at about one-third the former pace.

Only 30 men showed up for work Monday, Schrader said. At this stage of construction, the project could use 90 to 100 pairs of hands, he added.

Because union people did not want to work next to nonunion people, a system was set up where union members would be on the job from 6 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and the nonunion T & M Construction Co. crew would work from 2:30 p.m. till dark.

Schrader said the 6 a.m. starting time "probably scared some union men away. If they can work somewhere else, they probably will. It all pays the same."

At the current rate, the UNL fieldhouse "definitely won't be done for basketball," he said. "We'll be lucky if it's finished by the first of the year. But we'll keep plugging along."

Roy Godwin, business manager for the Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 88, said some workers have quit to accept jobs in Omaha rather than work six-hour days, 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The union's contract is for work between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., he stressed. If union employees start work at 6 a.m., they are entitled to two hours of overtime pay, he said. The university has refused to pay time and a half.

Godwin said "talk" circulating Monday indicated union workers may be willing to work from 7 a.m. till 3 p.m. if paid for eight hours.

Union employees will discuss the proposal with the general foreman and the mechanical contractor before negotiating with the university, he said.

If paid for 40 hours a week, some of the original crew may be persuaded to return to work, Godwin said. "That would be a definite asset. The original crew knows where things are and what has to be done. The new crew . . . well, they're new."

Trial Of Accused Greek Army Plotters Begins

Athens, Greece (AP) — The trial of 21 former army officers accused of plotting to overthrow Premier Constantine Karamanlis opened Monday, and defense attorneys moved to have the charges thrown out.

The trial was the first major court case in Greece since the military regime collapsed a year ago during the Cyprus war. All defendants pleaded innocent.

The officers, ranging in rank from captain to brigadier general, were among 39 arrested when the alleged plot was uncovered by junior officers last February. Investigating officers cleared 16 and two others are to be tried separately.

The opening session before a military tribunal brought defense objections to court procedures and missing witnesses. The defense asked that the charges be dismissed on grounds that several defendants were not under oath when pretrial testimony was taken.

The court recessed until Tuesday to study the defense request. If the court accepts the motion, new testimony would be taken and the trial delayed.

The defendants are charged with plotting to overthrow Karamanlis in order to restore military rule, return Greece to NATO, outlaw the Communist party and obtain release from jail for the country's former military rulers.

Several defendants have charged that the government fabricated the plot to facilitate a purge of military elements believed friendly to the former military rulers.

The defendants could draw the death sentence if found guilty.

Brig. Gen. Dimitrios Ioannides, the strongman who toppled dictator George Papadopoulos in November 1973, and another officer will be tried in a criminal court because they were civilians at the time the conspiracy was allegedly planned.

Ioannides and his hardline junta collapsed during the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in July 1974, and turned over power to civilians, restoring democratic rule after seven and a half years of dictatorship.

About 70 witnesses for the defense and prosecution are scheduled to testify before the military tribunal headed by Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Plevrakis.

Retired Maj. Aristides Palainis, one of the defendants, said in a statement to newsmen prior to the trial opening: "We face justice with confidence that it will prove our innocence."

An estimated 2,000 persons attended a Popular Democrat rally in Leiria, 100 miles north of Lisbon, in one of the party's first demonstrations since it left the government.

Speakers accused the left-wing military government of permitting the Communist party to dominate the trade unions, news media and government bureaucracy.

Several armed air force police watched the crowd, and a few blocks away other troops guarded the local Communist party headquarters.

The Socialist party triggered the crisis by walking out of the cabinet 11 days ago, charging that Goncalves and other radical officers were guiding the country toward dictatorship. The centrist Popular Democrat party then left the government last week, leaving only the Communists and a small pro-Communist party represented in the cabinet.

Lisbon, Portugal (AP) — Socialists sacked four more Communist offices in outlying cities Monday as the ruling Revolutionary Council met in urgent session to try and defuse the worst governmental crisis since the leftist coup 15 months ago.

A mass rally by 50,000 Socialists in Lisbon Saturday was followed by Socialist-Communist clashes throughout the country that left two persons dead, 40 injured and 14 Communist party headquarters damaged or destroyed.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes, seeking reconciliation, said after a weekend council meeting that a new government would be formed soon. He did not say if Goncalves would head it.

Cosmonauts Make Safe Touchdown On Soviet Asian Plain

Moscow — The two Soviet cosmonauts of Soyuz 19 touched down safely in a billowing cloud of dust on the steppes of Soviet central Asia Monday, successfully winding up their rendezvous in space with the American Apollonauts.

Col. Aleksei A. Leonov and Valery N. Kubasov were described by Soviet space officials as feeling fine after they climbed unsteadily out of their heat-scalded capsule. Leonov initially described their historic flight as "hard, very hard."

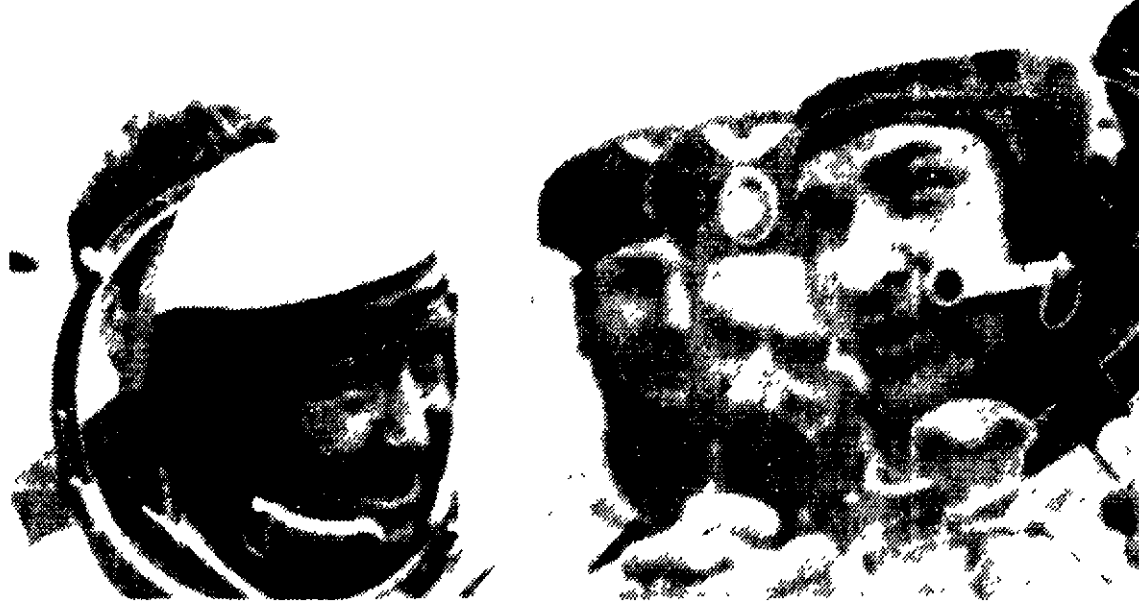

The Soyuz 19 descent vehicle, bobbing below an orange-and-white horizontally striped parachute, landed precisely on schedule at 1:51 p.m. Moscow time (5:31 a.m. CDT) nearly 34 miles northeast of the town of Arkalyk in central Kazakhstan.

Enveloped in dust, the capsule was toppled over onto its side by the pull of the drifting parachute. Helicopter-borne search-and-rescue specialists, wearing tan coveralls and jaunty blue berets, appeared within a few minutes to help the astronauts scramble out onto the grass-tufted earth.

300 Miles From Launch

The touchdown site was reported to be slightly over 300 miles from the Baikonur cosmodrome, where the Soyuz spacecraft was lofted into orbit six days ago.

The landing was witnessed on television by millions of Russians as helicopters with cameras followed the capsule floating down to earth. The landing was the first to be shown live in the Soviet Union, which has generally kept its space program veiled in secrecy. However, a malfunctioning television camera inside the descent vehicle prevented viewers from watching the astronauts during the actual descent.

Leonov, who was first to emerge from the capsule, asserted that "we worked strictly on schedule and it was hard, very hard."

According to the press agency Tass, he said that he and Kubasov had slept no more than 15 hours during the six-day flight. This was later disputed by several Soviet officials in Moscow, one of whom contended that the astronauts, who occasionally took sleeping pills, slept "no less than seven hours a day."

'Good To Be Home'

"It feels good to be back home on Mother Earth," Leonov was quoted as saying before he and Kubasov climbed into separate jet helicopters for the short flight to Arkalyk. From Arkalyk, a town of 20,000, the astronauts were flown by plane to the Baikonur cosmodrome.

The smooth landing brought to a close the Soviet phase of the Apollo-Soyuz joint mission, preparation for which began more than three years ago. The three American astronauts aboard the Apollo spacecraft are due to return to earth Thursday.

A flood of congratulations accorded the Soyuz astronauts upon their return reflected the Soviet pleasure at the mission's outcome, which is being hailed here as a dividend of detente.

The top Kremlin leadership praised Leonov and Kubasov for their performance and also paid tribute "to the great skill of the American astronauts Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald Slayton."

The message, which was signed by the Communist Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev, President Nikolai Y. Podgorny and Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin, termed the flight "an important step" in Soviet-American scientific and technical cooperation and declared that "its successful completion opens up new prospects for joint work by different countries in the peaceful exploration of outer space."

New Assignments

In reply, the Soyuz astronauts thanked the Soviet government and the Communist Party for "the trust in us" and said they were "ready to fulfill new assignments of the motherland."

The Soviet astronauts' final workday in space began Monday at 7:30 a.m. Moscow time. As their 15,000-pound spaceship made its 94th revolution around the earth, at 9:05 a.m. Leonov and Kubasov began preparing for their descent, reducing the cabin pressure and checking out the pressurized space suits they had donned.

They transferred from the orbital module into the descent vehicle and sealed the connecting hatch. At 1:10 p.m. on the 96th orbit, a 194-second blast on the retro-rockets cut the ship's speed sufficiently to drop it out of orbit. The orbital and instrument assembly modules on either side of the descent vehicle were jettisoned.

As the ship plunged into the heavier atmosphere of the earth, the astronauts advised the mission control center in Moscow that "the windows are blackened. It's hard to see anything, but we feel the work is going on normally." Radio contact was cut off for a short while.

Slightly more than six miles above the earth, the braking and main parachutes deployed automatically. As the capsule floated earthward, it was spotted and followed by the small fleet of waiting helicopters.

New Delhi — Opposition members of the Indian government, in a special session of Parliament that was called for a vote on it, condemned the state of emergency declared by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on June 26. They protested the jailing of their colleagues in the opposition, the censorship of the press and the suspension of civil liberties.

Blackmarketing Found

Washington (Washington Star) — Interstate Commerce Commission investigators have uncovered a blackmarketing, perhaps on a large scale, of railroad grain cars throughout much of Midwest. In a series of sworn statements filed with the commission Monday, the ICC investigators say the big grain companies, taking advantage of discount rates for large quantities of big, covered hopper cars, are tying up the major portion of the grain-carrying fleets of Midwestern railroads, making it almost impossible for individual farmers or grain elevator operators to obtain cars when they need them.

Postal Contract May Drive Up Stamp Rates

Washington (UPI) — Negotiators agreed Monday on a new three-year contract which will give postal workers a $1,500 pay increase in its first two years plus other benefits, and probably drive up postal rates before the end of the year.

The settlement between the Postal Service and four unions representing 670,000 workers came three hours after the old contract had run out at midnight, raising the possibility of the first nationwide mail strike.

President James Rademacher of the 193,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers said, "I feel that our members will ratify by a substantial majority. It is the best we can do. There is enough in this contract."

The executive of the largest union, the 318,000-member American Postal Workers, solidly endorsed the pact and submitted it to a bargaining advisory committee for a mail ballot of all members.

Leaders of the two other postal workers unions also expected ratification, under their individual procedures, within a month.

Postmaster Gen. Benjamin Bailar, commenting on the contract terms, said, "The financial situation of the Postal Service is pretty grim," and predicted postal rates would have to go up this year.

Under the tentative agreement, an average $1,500 raise will be rolled into paychecks by the end of the second year. Cost-of-living adjustments every six months will provide for raises of one cent an hour for each .04% rise in the consumer price index.

In the contract that expired Saturday, the cost of living adjustment averaged more than $1,300 a worker per year.

The unions also preserved a no-layoff guarantee. The Postal Service had hoped to get rid of that clause in order to streamline some operations and cut down its payroll.

Chief federal mediator W. J. Usery Jr., called the 81 days of bargaining and negotiation "the toughest I've ever been in."

Bailar said the settlement struck "a proper balance" between the interests of the postal employees and the American public.

Ford Vetoes Legislation To Roll Back Oil Prices

Washington (UPI) — President Ford Monday vetoed legislation that would have rolled back oil prices, and vowed he would reject extension of existing petroleum price controls unless Congress adopts his energy program.

Ford said he vetoed the bill "because it would increase petroleum consumption, cut domestic production, increase reliance on insecure petroleum imports and avoid the issue of phasing out unwieldy price controls."

Unless a new law is passed, federal price control over petroleum ends Aug. 31. Ford wants a decontrol of prices spread over 30 months plus a windfall tax on excess profits by oil companies and tax rebates to consumers for the higher energy costs that his program will bring.

"I urge Congress not to disprove my administrative plan of gradual decontrol," Ford said in his veto message. "If it is accepted, I will accept a simple extension of price and allocation authorities."

Ford's decontrol plan is expected to be killed by the heavily Democratic House on Tuesday.

"If decontrol is not accepted, I will have no choice but to veto the simple six-month extension of these (current control) authorities now being considered by Congress," Ford said.

The vetoed bill would have rolled back the price of oil from wells dug since 1973 — so-called

"new oil" — from $13.25 a barrel to $11.28. It would have kept the current price of $5.25 a barrel for petroleum coming from wells dug before 1973 — "old oil" that amounts to some 60% of domestic production.

Ford said this will would have brought "even more complex regulations." He said it would have made even more difficult his goal of making America independent of foreign fuel suppliers by 1985.

Ex-Aide: JFK Didn't Know

Washington (UPI) — Theodore J. Sorensen, a former top aide to President John F. Kennedy, said Monday, Kennedy never knew of, authorized or condoned any assassination plots against any foreign leader at any time.

Sorensen, who served as special counsel to Kennedy, talked to reporters after testifying under oath before the Senate Intelligence Committee.

"It was very clear to me that at no time did the President know of, or authorize or condone any assassination plot against any foreign leader at any time."

Sorensen was asked principally about alleged plots against Cuban leader Fidel Castro but in answer to questions included the assassinations of Dominican dictator Gen. Rafael Trujillo and South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Archeologists In China Find 2,100-Year-Old Tomb

Hong Kong (UPI) — Chinese archaeologists found the "well-preserved" body of a man enclosed in three coffins in a 2,100-year-old tomb in central China, the official New China News Agency reported Monday.

NCNA said that "a valuable collection of relics" in addition to the corpse also was recently unearthed in the town of Chinancheng, once known as Ying, the capital of the state of Chu.

"The inscription on a bamboo tablet found in the tomb shows that the corpse was interred in the fifth moon of the 13th year of the reign of Emperor Wen, or 167 B.C.," NCNA reported in a broadcast monitored here.

The dispatch described the tomb as a "rectangular earthen shaft almost 10 meters deep, with an inclined passageway leading from the ground to the grave-pit."

Three Coffins

The corpse "was enclosed in a series of three receptacles," NCNA said, "an outer coffin and two inner caskets, all well preserved."

The report noted that although the outer coffin and the outer casket were found to have water in them, "The innermost casket

... was airtight." It contained a quantity of a dark red fluid, believed to be a kind of preservative, NCNA said.

The discovery was the second in three years by Chinese archaeologists of a "fairly well-preserved corpse" in diggings in the area. A female corpse was reported to have been found in July 1972, buried in a tomb dating back more than 2,100 years.

Both were believed to have died about the age of 50 and both were immersed in a dark red fluid.

Skin Still Elastic

NCNA said the man's skin was still elastic upon discovery and the small and big joints of the limbs still movable, in addition he had a full set of teeth.

"The body measures 165.7 centimeters (about 5 feet 3 inches) long and weighs 52.5 kilograms (115.5 pounds)," NCNA said. "An autopsy shows that there is still a fairly big mass of brain in the skull, occupying about four-fifths of the cranial cavity."

The NCNA description noted that the brain is bigger in volume than that of the female corpse and the "internal organs have remained intact in their external shape."

NCNA said the male corpse, restored to its original shape after autopsy, has been "treated with preservatives and kept under proper care."

Unearthed with the corpse were more than 500 burial objects, including carved wooden miniature chariots, boats, horses, cattle and figurines. Pottery and bronze utensils, inscribed bamboo, copper cash, clothing, head gear, shoes and stockings made of silk or linen were also found in the different compartments.

Another Step Back?

Nebraska's effort to reform and upgrade its correctional system has taken a tortuous, difficult route characterized more often than not, it seems, by taking two steps back for every one forward.

The medium-minimum security prison issue apparently was finally resolved this year, but in two key program areas progress was stalled — and for questionable reasons.

Efforts to locate a chemical dependency unit for inmates of the Nebraska Penal Complex at a deserted missile base near Crete, as proposed by Director of Corrections Joseph Vitek, were scuttled by area residents who protested locating the facility there and by gun-shy state officials who took the protest to heart. A new home will have to be found for a chemical dependency unit at several times the cost of the proposed Crete site.

And plans to remodel an underused building at the Lincoln Regional Center for use as a center to house diagnostic and evaluation functions — all-important steps in the correctional process — were short-circuited by Gov. Exon last week.

Locating the D&E center at the regional center had provoked the ire of Yankee Hill area residents who petitioned the governor to reverse the decision. They worried about security at the facility. Regional center staff also questioned what effect prisoners at the D&E center would have on mental patients.

Exon said he will ask the Legislature in January to build the center from scratch at the state reformatory, where a new medium-minimum security facility will be built, as originally proposed by the Legislature's Judiciary Committee. It was Exon who has suggested the remodeling of the regional center building. A new D&E center at the reformatory site would roughly double the cost of the center (from $2.4 million to $4.9 million), it is estimated.

Exon said he was convinced that it is not a good idea to mix mental patients with prisoners.

The purpose of a diagnostic and evaluation center is to evaluate and to identify the best corrections program, ranging from maximum security incarceration to immediate parole, best suited to each prisoner. The D&E center is widely regarded as the top priority in the state's efforts to upgrade its penal system.

The decision to not remodel an existing facility but instead build a new one will delay opening the D&E center by a minimum of two years. Judiciary Committee Chairman Roland Laedtker and some others are critical of Exon's decision. They are concerned about delaying full implementation of a key part of the correctional program. We share that concern and wonder, in light of past experience concerning legislative-executive haggling over the penal reform program, just how many years the D&E center will really be delayed.

The D&E center is a key part of a program which is designed to salvage potentially useful lives while protecting society. It is strange but apparently true that those who are most directly affected by such programs and stand to benefit from them the most are often the last and the least thought of.

In The Storm's Wake

The sudden and furious summer storm which swept out of the northwest Saturday night brought some welcome moisture to these parts and elsewhere in the central and eastern areas of the state. But it was also a destructive blow-out which disrupted electric power over a widespread area in Lincoln, tossed roofs, outbuildings and tree limbs around like match sticks, swamped boats — and brought death. Summer in Nebraska.

Considering the severity of the storm and the extent of the damage, the Lincoln Electric System crews, having their weekend interrupted and working around the clock, did a good job of repairing damage and getting power back to homes and businesses — although some homes were without electricity for up to 30 hours.

At Branched Oak reservoir northwest of Lincoln there was tragedy. One drowning, and for awhile it appeared as if there might be many more. A large number, perhaps 30, boats were capsized when gale-like winds hit the lake. In our opinion, the immediate response of emergency personnel and later search and rescue efforts were impressive.

But people who flock to these lakes for water recreation should learn something from Saturday's storm. Although the winds hit with seeming suddenness, the storm was building up slowly. The cloud formation and lightning could be seen for quite a long period of time before the front crossed the lake.

The weather and the water are not to be treated casually. Experiencing a storm such as pummeled Branched Oak Saturday, one can readily see the wisdom of employing extra caution and using life jackets.

Smudged Reading Glasses

Lincoln, Neb.

The July 15 letter from Mrs. Toman quoted false information of an intentionally damaging nature. Nowhere in the article, "Women Try Going It Alone," was any reference made to the subjects as welfare recipients. Nor was there a single word to indicate that either of us frequent "beer joints."

Mrs. Toman should give her reading glasses a bath. I am sorry she thinks so poorly of giraffes. They are dignified, gentle creatures.

Who Holds Winning Cards?

Lincoln, Neb.

Citizens don't listen to the concerned property owners on 48th and Holdrege Streets who don't want the streets widened.

When your car is idling in a traffic jam, it's your gas you are wasting, not theirs. The streets' trees are mostly elms and will eventually be removed by the Dutch elm disease. They weren't around objecting when Vine, North 48th and South Streets were widened.

They knew they were buying property on an arterial when they moved where they did. All the taxpayers in the city pay for the widening. It doesn't cost the adjacent property owners any additional money.

Their situation is different from Fremont Street in that it struts at 48th and goes only to 70th, a distance of only 22 blocks. Cars are not going to leave us regardless of what the environmentalists say. The city has a responsibility to see that they can move from one point to another in an expeditious manner.

After improving 27th, then 48th the next logical street for the city to improve. After improving Vine, then Holdrege was the next logical street to improve.

The 48th Street and Holdrege Street residents do not have the winning cards.

He Likes I-80 Art

Lincoln, Neb.

I want to express my full support of the I-80 art project. I think it is an outstanding idea to beautify our Interstate Highway with fine art and also leave something for our children to be proud of.

As a young Nebraskan, it is hard for me to understand the unwillingness of some citizens to appreciate anything modern or contemporary. I suggest these same people have not even taken the time to study and appreciate art of any kind and will oppose any attempt to promote any kind of art in our fair state.

This is an excellent attempt to observe our bicentennial without the sickening commercialistic trash that has been present in all our holidays (Christmas, Easter and now the nation's 200th birthday). We should continue this project with vigor, for us and for future generations to admire and treasure.

President Of Oil

WASHINGTON — The oil problem is essentially political in nature and can be overcome only by the power of government. But the United States has been unable to cope with the problem because the Nixon and Ford administrations have insisted upon treating it as an economic issue that can be resolved by the natural play of market forces.

Because of the sudden, huge increase in the price of oil, the inflation and the recession were both made much worse than they would otherwise have been.

Ford follows the judgment of the major international oil companies on oil problems in the same way that he amiably heeds the advice of other big businesses on the problems that interest them.

This is partly because, like Richard Nixon before him, he is heavily dependent on the oil industry as part of his political base. He is also a stolid believer in the business ideology of rugged individualism, free markets and price competition virtues that exist more clearly in his mind than they do in the practices of the international oil industry.

But, basically, Ford plods ahead with his disastrous policies because he does not know any better.

There are many men in both parties in Congress who much better understand the real nature of the oil problem. But because the solutions require sacrifice, it is almost insuperably difficult to put together a two-thirds majority in support of legislation.

The fundamental fact is that there is no oil shortage and no energy crisis. Rather, there is a political crisis. The oil-exporting countries have become cohesive enough to blackmail the wealthy industrial countries by raising the price of oil to an extortionate level, keeping it there, and threatening to raise it still higher.

In this crisis, no one is defending the interests of American consumers. Although five of the seven major international oil companies are American-owned, their interests and the nation's interests are not identical.

With the world market now glutted with oil, these American companies help the Arab countries allocate and rationalize the cutbacks in production that are necessary to keep prices from falling. As business partners of the Arabs in the Middle East and as producers of oil in the United States, these companies have no incentive to keep the price of oil down. On the contrary, they are the propaganda and political protagonists inside this country for the cartel.

Ford is now urging Congress to abolish the price ceiling of $5.25 a barrel on oil from wells that were producing before 1973. This so-called "old oil" provides 40% of U.S. supplies. The rest of native oil is selling at the world cartel price of about $13 a barrel.

Since companies produce both old and new oil, they are getting an average price for their total output of roughly $7.50 a barrel. That is triple the price of only two years ago. Yet the companies have the audacity to say that they need to get the extortionate world price for all their oil if they are to have any "incentive" to search for and produce additional oil in this country.

The United States ought to have the political will and toughness to refuse to be blackmailed. It should stabilize the price of domestic oil, old and new, at $7.50 a barrel as provided in a bill sponsored by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. It should then make a concerted effort to break the world cartel price.

The Arab countries supplied only 1.3 million barrels of oil a day to this country in the first quarter of this year, less than 8% of total U.S. oil requirements. By conservation, the U.S. could promptly reduce oil consumption by that amount. A sustained cutback of this magnitude would be a significant political signal to the cartel.

Gasoline consumption could be limited by law to the present level of consumption. As the economy recovered and as Detroit produced more fuel-efficient cars, gasoline consumption could gradually be reduced from present levels by steeply rising gasoline taxes.

The United States could adopt a much firmer policy toward Saudi Arabia and Iran than merely getting some of its depreciated dollars back by selling them military equipment and petro-chemical plants. They should both be treated the way one treats any blackmailer.

As the world's strongest economic power and greatest single user of petroleum, the United States could face down the cartel and win. But not as long as its President espouses the policies of the American division of the world oil cartel.

Israel, U.N.

NEW YORK — No doubt it was predictable that a conference of 40 Islamic countries, meeting in Saudi Arabia last week, would call for the expulsion of Israel from the United Nations, despite stern American warnings against such a move. But it would be irrational if similar expulsion resolutions should be passed at the forthcoming meetings of African nations in Uganda and the non-aligned countries in Peru.

The United States has made its position plain enough. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the new ambassador to the U.N., told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that public reaction might cause Congress to cut off the American financial contribution to the United Nations if Israel were suspended from the General Assembly, as it already has been from the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In the last session, South Africa was suspended from the General Assembly, providing the precedent that has alarmed Washington.

In his Milwaukee speech last week, Secretary of State Kissinger was more cautious but nevertheless clear. He warned the third-world majority in the United Nations that "arbitrary tactics" could alienate the American people from the support that had been the U.N.'s "lifeblood" and that the "integrity and survival of the General Assembly itself" might be at stake.

But it is not merely these warnings to which the Third-World majority should pay heed. In fact, Kissinger's caution in the Milwaukee speech no doubt reflects the fear that such statements could backfire on their authors. Third-World countries, not unmindful of the onetime dominance of the U.N. by Washington and its allies and sensitive to their own colonial histories, might well see the Kissinger-Moynihan position as an attempt to rule the U.N. by threat, even though Washington no longer has the actual votes to control it.

It is the rest of the Kissinger speech that should carry the real messages to the U.N. majority. "Those who seek to manipulate the United Nations membership by procedural abuses," the secretary said at one point, "may well inherit an empty shell."

So they may. If the suspension of Israel and other "arbitrary tactics" should in fact alienate American public support for the U.N., which they very probably would do, it might not only be Washington's financial contribution but even its actual participation that could be lost. And since the United Nations could have little force or meaning if one of the superpowers neither participated in its deliberations nor accepted its authority, the Third-World majority would be dominant over an empty shell indeed.

Thus, however tempting the suspension of Israel might be, not only to Moslem countries but to others who see her as an outpost of Western imperialism and exploitation, the suspension of Israel at the cost of American participation in the United Nations would be profoundly self-defeating for the Third World.

Kissinger also promised "concrete and constructive proposals for action across a broad spectrum of international economic activities such as trade and commodities, world food production, and international financial measures." While such "concrete" proposals may seem to be emerging from the Ford administration at a snail's pace, if at all, Kissinger contended that "never before have the industrial nations been more ready to deal with the problems of development in a constructive spirit."

That "constructive spirit" has in fact been forced on the industrial nations by the Arab oil embargo and other commodity developments in the Third World, and it may at the moment be more defensive than constructive, but something of the kind surely does exist.

Since it is in the international economic arena that the most vital interests of developing countries lie, and since the United States is and will remain one of the major actors in that arena, it seems self-evident that the Third-World majority could be better employed in a U.N. that still exerts some legal and moral force on the American people and their government.

"History haunts us all," Henry Kissinger said in an ironic reference to the days when the United States dominated the world organization on which it now urges moderation. Indeed it does, and none will be haunted more than those who act to destroy the U.N.'s effectiveness at the moment they need it most.

Aerosol Addicts

WASHINGTON — It used to be glue sniffing. Now it's aerosol sniffing.

The young and the poor, seeking a cheap "high," have taken to inhaling the toxic fumes of spray paints, hair sprays and deodorants out of aerosol cans.

It is a dangerous pastime, which kills about 125 young people every year. The fumes depress the central nervous system and can lead to nervous disorders, loss of memory and, occasionally, heart failure and death.

An unpublished study, conducted by Philip Vargas of the Drug Abuse Council, found that aerosol sniffing is popular "among the very poor, disenfranchised and marginal minority groups such as Chicano and Indian youngsters."

Government bureaucrats call it "solvent abuse." The back-alley users call it "huffing." One New Mexico doctor described it as "a poor man's marijuana."

But the consequences, according to the study, can be pathetic. Here are a few examples:

— "In Colorado," the study reports, "a mother told a community worker that her son even sleeps with a cloth sprayed with paint over his nose and that whenever she reprimands him for his sniffing, he threatens her and sometimes beats her."

— A 17-year-old was described by his teacher as "a very gentle boy" and a good student before he started sniffing. Now his probation officer says that "his eyes are always bloodshot and he has bluish-colored rings around his eyes and mouth. His speech has deteriorated and, at times, he is very hot-tempered and very nervous. He gets frustrated very easily and sometimes he is extremely violent."

— In Tucson, the researchers found a "four-year-old child of a chronic sniffer" who was introduced to sniffing by his father. "Rag, daddy. Rag, daddy," the little tyke cries, asking his father for another sniff.

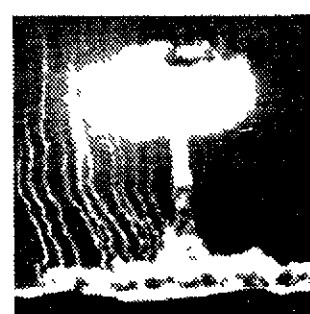

— "My son has been sniffing paint from spray cans since he was 19," writes a mother. "My son is a very sick person and I just don't know how to deal with him any more. His mind is already so deteriorated I don't know if anything can be done for him."

For that matter, little is being done by the government for any of the aerosol addicts.

BOB CONSIDINE

Pretty Joe And Big B.

NEW YORK — Completely eclipsed by such historic current events as the All Star Game, Joe Namath's soul-searching decision to sell his pretty face to Faberge for $5 million, Dear Ann Landers' fateful advice to herself to bounce her mate of many years, the proper pronunciation of Soyuz (. . . ooze), and whether to pay Richard Nixon $121,000 next year for not being president, was the anniversary of a little event that happened at Alamogordo, N.M., just 30 years before.

At dawn, July 16, 1945, the dim stilled desert was rent asunder by "the light of a thousand suns," and there spread over the scalded land a tidal wave of sound that was like a bellow from hell. Birth had been given to the most diabolical destructive force ever contrived by man — the atomic bomb.

Conscience-stricken over their contribution to the creation of the bomb, 60 of the scientists attempted to reach Gen. George C. Marshall (who was with President Truman at Potsdam) to beg of him not to use the bomb against Japanese civilian centers. An aide of Marshall brusquely dismissed their representatives.

They had come with options: 1) Tell the Japanese we had a terrible new bomb, so please surrender; 2) Ask them to clear Tokyo harbor and invite the emperor and his war advisers to assemble on shore and witness a demonstration of the bomb. When Marshall's aide laughed at the suggestion, one utterly serious scientist asked to be strapped to the first bomb that was dropped.

The bomb that dropped on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945, killed or wounded 130,000 and destroyed

90% of the city of 430,000. The Aug. 9 Nagasaki bomb, not properly fused nor adequately aimed (because the primary target that day was Kokura), nevertheless killed or wounded 75,000, and demolished a third of the city of 340,000.

The security that surrounded the birth and delivery of the only two nuclear bombs we ever employed made a mockery of the sieves of Watergate and its holey off-shoots, the F.B.I., C.I.A., Justice, CREEP, the White House, etc. The sinking of the U.S.S. Indianapolis after it had delivered a small portion of the fissionable material for the Hiroshima bomb to Tinian, was hushed up for days.

Scientists working on the bomb were given code names and guarded night and day. One had a habit of walking across traffic-filled streets while deeply immersed in some far-out mathematical theorem.

A radio broadcaster who told his audience that we were on the verge of developing a bomb that would end the war was taken into custody within minutes after he signed off the air, warned sternly that he might be subject to years in prison and a $10,000 fine, then instructed to return to his job the next night . . . and never mention anything about a bomb again.

Librarians through the country were instructed to obtain the names and addresses of any person asking to see the Saturday Evening Post issue of the early 1940s which contained an article by William L. Laurence, the New York Times science writer, who had written that the atom could be split and release torrents of energy.

We put the Rosenbergs to death, convicted of passing atomic secrets to Russia, who came up with its own bomb in 1949. Klaus Fuchs, the young British-nationalized German spy who was cleared to work at Las Alamos (where even Sen. Harry S. Truman had been refused permission) supplied the Rosenbergs with their information mostly by way of a courier named Harry Gold. Caught and convicted under British law, Fuchs drew a maximum 14-year jail term, with time off for good behavior. How did he get to Las Alamos in the first place? Winston Churchill okayed the integrity of the entire British team of scientists on the ground that Britons never never could be slaves to an enemy.

Tempus fugit. We now give what once were broodingly called atomic secrets to 40 nations. Britain, France, the U.S.S.R., China and India have the bomb. It appears to be only a matter of time before Israel, a conglomerate of Arab states, Iran, and a couple of South American countries join the club. Atomic bills run into billions piled on billions. We and Russia can now kill everybody in our respective countries five times.

But who cares, as long as Joe Namath will smell sweet until 1995?

Another Step Back?

Nebraska's effort to reform and upgrade its correctional system has taken a tortuous, difficult route characterized more often than not, it seems, by taking two steps back for every one forward.

The medium-minimum security prison issue apparently was finally resolved this year, but in two key program areas progress was stalled — and for questionable reasons.

Efforts to locate a chemical dependency unit for inmates of the Nebraska Penal Complex at a deserted missile base near Crete, as proposed by Director of Corrections Joseph Vitek, were scuttled by area residents who protested locating the facility there and by gun-shy state officials who took the protest to heart. A new home will have to be found for a chemical dependency unit at several times the cost of the proposed Crete site.

And plans to remodel an underused building at the Lincoln Regional Center for use as a center to house diagnostic and evaluation functions — all-important steps in the correctional process — were short-circuited by Gov. Exon last week.

Locating the D&E center at the regional center had provoked the ire of Yankee Hill area residents who petitioned the governor to reverse the decision. They worried about security at the facility. Regional center staff also questioned what effect prisoners at the D&E center would have on mental patients.

Exon said he will ask the Legislature in January to build the center from scratch at the state reformatory, where a new medium-minimum security facility will be built, as originally proposed by the Legislature's Judiciary Committee. It was Exon who has suggested the remodeling of the regional center building. A new D&E center at the reformatory site would roughly double the cost of the center (from $2.4 million to $4.9 million), it is estimated.

Exon said he was convinced that it is not a good idea to mix mental patients with prisoners.

The purpose of a diagnostic and evaluation center is to evaluate and to identify the best corrections program, ranging from maximum security incarceration to immediate parole, best suited to each prisoner. The D&E center is widely regarded as the top priority in the state's efforts to upgrade its penal system.

The decision to not remodel an existing facility but instead build a new one will delay opening the D&E center by a minimum of two years. Judiciary Committee Chairman Roland Luedtke and some others are critical of Exon's decision. They are concerned about delaying full implementation of a key part of the correctional program. We share that concern and wonder, in light of past experience concerning legislative-executive haggling over the penal reform program, just how many years the D&E center will really be delayed.

The D&E center is a key part of a program which is designed to salvage potentially useful lives while protecting society. It is strange but apparently true that those who are most directly affected by such programs and stand to benefit from them the most are often the last and the least thought of.

In The Storm's Wake

The sudden and furious summer storm which swept out of the northwest Saturday night brought some welcome moisture to these parts and elsewhere in the central and eastern areas of the state. But it was also a destructive blow-out which disrupted electric power over a widespread area in Lincoln, tossed roofs, outbuildings and tree limbs around like match sticks, swamped boats — and brought death. Summer in Nebraska.

Considering the severity of the storm and the extent of the damage, the Lincoln Electric System crews, having their weekend interrupted and working around the clock, did a good job of repairing damage and getting power back to homes and businesses — although some homes were without electricity for up to 30 hours.

At Branched Oak reservoir northwest of Lincoln there was tragedy. One drowning, and for awhile it appeared as if there might be many more. A large number, perhaps 30, boats were capsized when gale-like winds hit the lake. In our opinion, the immediate response of emergency personnel and later search and rescue efforts were impressive.

But people who flock to these lakes for water recreation should learn something from Saturday's storm. Although the winds hit with seeming suddenness, the storm was building up slowly. The cloud formation and lightning could be seen for quite a long period of time before the front crossed the lake.

The weather and the water are not to be treated casually. Experiencing a storm such as pummeled Branched Oak Saturday, one can readily see the wisdom of employing extra caution and using life jackets.

Smudged Reading Glasses

Lincoln, Neb.
The July 15 letter from Mrs. Toman quoted false information of an intentionally damaging nature. Nowhere in the article, "Women Try Going It Alone," was any reference made to the subjects as welfare recipients. Nor was there a single word to indicate that either of us frequent "beer joints."

Mrs. Toman should give her reading glasses a bath. I am sorry she thinks so poorly of giraffes. They are dignified, gentle creatures.

Who Holds Winning Cards?

Lincoln, Neb.
Citizens don't listen to the concerned property owners on 48th and Holdrege Streets who don't want the streets widened. When your car is idling in a traffic jam, it's your gas you are wasting, not theirs. The streets' trees are mostly elms and will eventually be removed by the Dutch elm disease. They weren't around objecting when Vine, North 48th and South Streets were widened.

They knew they were buying property on an arterial when they moved where they did. All the taxpayers in the city pay for the widening. It doesn't cost the adjacent property owners any additional money.

Their situation is different from Fremont Street in that it struts at 48th and goes only to 70th, a distance of only 22 blocks. Cars are not going to leave us regardless of what the environmentalists say. The city has a responsibility to see that they can move from one point to another in an expeditious manner. After improving 27th, then 48th the next logical street for the city to improve. After improving Vine, then Holdrege was the next logical street to improve.

The 48th Street and Holdrege Street residents do not have the winning cards.

He Likes I-80 Art

Lincoln, Neb.
I want to express my full support of the I-80 art project. I think it is an outstanding idea to beautify our Interstate Highway with fine art and also leave something for our children to be proud of.

As a young Nebraskan, it is hard for me to understand the unwillingness of some citizens to appreciate anything modern or contemporary. I suggest these same people have not even taken the time to study and appreciate art of any kind and will oppose any attempt to promote any kind of art in our fair state.

This is an excellent attempt to observe our bicentennial without the sickening commercialistic trash that has been present in all our holidays (Christmas, Easter and now the nation's 200th birthday). We should continue this project with vigor, for us and for future generations to admire and treasure.

President Of Oil

WASHINGTON — The oil problem is essentially political in nature and can be overcome only by the power of government. But the United States has been unable to cope with the problem because the Nixon and Ford administrations have insisted upon treating it as an economic issue that can be resolved by the natural play of market forces.

Because of the sudden, huge increase in the price of oil, the inflation and the recession were both made much worse than they would otherwise have been.

Ford follows the judgment of the major international oil companies on oil problems in the same way that he amiably heeds the advice of other big businesses on the problems that interest them.

This is partly because, like Richard Nixon before him, he is heavily dependent on the oil industry as part of his political base. He is also a stolid believer in the business ideology of rugged individualism, free markets and price competition virtues that exist more clearly in his mind than they do in the practices of the international oil industry.

But, basically, Ford plods ahead with his disastrous policies because he does not know any better.

There are many men in both parties in Congress who much better understand the real nature of the oil problem. But because the solutions require sacrifice, it is almost insuperably difficult to put together a two-thirds majority in support of legislation.

The fundamental fact is that there is no oil shortage and no energy crisis. Rather, there is a political crisis. The oil-exporting countries have become cohesive enough to blackmail the wealthy industrial countries by raising the price of oil to an extortionate level, keeping it there, and threatening to raise it still higher.

In this crisis, no one is defending the interests of American consumers. Although five of the seven major international oil companies are American-owned, their interests and the nation's interests are not identical.

With the world market now glutted with oil, these American companies help the Arab countries allocate and rationalize the cutbacks in production that are necessary to keep prices from falling. As business partners of the Arabs in the Middle East and as producers of oil in the United States, these companies have no incentive to keep the price of oil down. On the contrary, they are the propaganda and political protagonists inside this country for the cartel.

Ford is now urging Congress to abolish the price ceiling of $5.25 a barrel on oil from wells that were producing before 1973. This so-called "old oil" provides 40% of U.S. supplies. The rest of native oil is selling at the world cartel price of about $13 a barrel.

Since companies produce both old and new oil, they are getting an average price for their total output of roughly $7.50 a barrel. That is triple the price of only two years ago. Yet the companies have the audacity to say that they need to get the extortionate world price for all their oil if they are to have any "incentive" to search for and produce additional oil in this country.

The United States ought to have the political will and toughness to refuse to be blackmailed. It should stabilize the price of domestic oil, old and new, at $7.50 a barrel as provided in a bill sponsored by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. It should then make a concerted effort to break the world cartel price.

The Arab countries supplied only 1.3 million barrels of oil a day to this country in the first quarter of this year, less than 8% of total U.S. oil requirements. By conservation, the U.S. could promptly reduce oil consumption by that amount. A sustained cutback of this magnitude would be a significant political signal to the cartel.

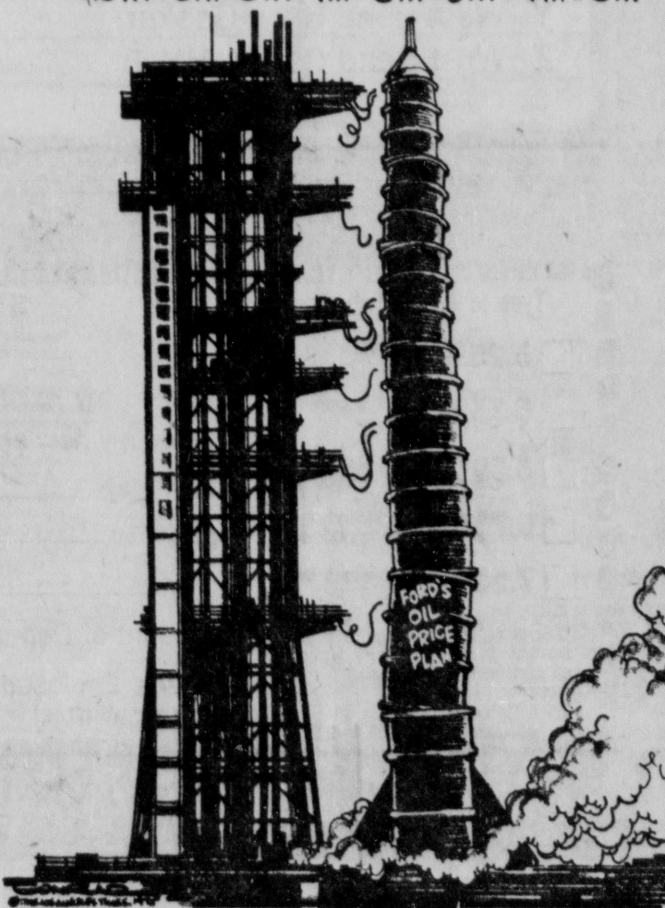

Gasoline consumption could be limited by law to the present level of consumption. As the economy recovered and as Detroit produced more fuel-efficient cars, gasoline consumption could gradually be reduced from present levels by steeply rising gasoline taxes.

The United States could adopt a much firmer policy toward Saudi Arabia and Iran than merely getting some of its depreciated dollars back by selling them military equipment and petro-chemical plants. They should both be treated the way one treats any blackmailer.

As the world's strongest economic power and greatest single user of petroleum, the United States could face down the cartel and win. But not as long as its President espouses the policies of the American division of the world oil cartel.

Israel, U.N.

NEW YORK — No doubt it was predictable that a conference of 40 Islamic countries, meeting in Saudi Arabia last week, would call for the expulsion of Israel from the United Nations, despite stern American warnings against such a move. But it would be irrational if similar expulsion resolutions should be passed at the forthcoming meetings of African nations in Uganda and the non-aligned countries in Peru.

The United States has its position plain enough. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the new ambassador to the U.N., told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that public reaction might cause Congress to cut off the American financial contribution to the United Nations if Israel were suspended from the General Assembly, as it already has been from the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In the last session, South Africa was suspended from the General Assembly, providing the precedent that has alarmed Washington.

In his Milwaukee speech last week, Secretary of State Kissinger was more cautious but nevertheless clear. He warned the third-world majority in the United Nations that "arbitrary tactics" could alienate the American people from the support that had been the U.N.'s "lifeblood" and that the "integrity and survival of the General Assembly itself" might be at stake.

But it is not merely these warnings to which the Third-World majority should pay heed. In fact, Kissinger's caution in the Milwaukee speech no doubt reflects the fear that such statements could backfire on their authors. Third-World countries, not unmindful of the one-time dominance of the U.N. by Washington and its allies and sensitive to their own colonial histories, might well see the Kissinger-Moynihan position as an attempt to rule the U.N. by threat, even though Washington no longer has the actual votes to control it.

It is the rest of the Kissinger speech that should carry the real messages to the U.N. majority. "Those who seek to manipulate the United Nations membership by procedural abuses," the secretary said at one point, "may well inherit an empty shell."

So they may. If the suspension of Israel and other "arbitrary tactics" should in fact alienate American public support for the U.N., which they very probably would do, it might not only be Washington's financial contribution but even its actual participation that could be lost. And since the United Nations could have little force or meaning if one of the superpowers neither participated in its deliberations nor accepted its authority, the Third-World majority would be dominant over an empty shell indeed.

Thus, however tempting the suspension of Israel might be, not only to Moslem countries but to others who see her as an outpost of Western imperialism and exploitation, the suspension of Israel at the cost of American participation in the United Nations would be profoundly self-defeating for the Third World.

Kissinger also promised "concrete and constructive proposals for action across a broad spectrum of international economic activities such as trade and commodities, world food production, and international financial measures." While such "concrete" proposals may seem to be emerging from the Ford administration at a snail's pace, if at all, Kissinger contended that "never before have the industrial nations been more ready to deal with the problems of development in a constructive spirit."

That "constructive spirit" has in fact been forced on the industrial nations by the Arab oil embargo and other commodity developments in the Third World, and it may at the moment be more defensive than constructive, but something of the kind surely does exist.

Since it is in the international economic arena that the most vital interests of developing countries lie, and since the United States is and will remain one of the major actors in that arena, it seems self-evident that the Third-World majority could be better employed in a U.N. that still exerts some legal and moral force on the American people and their government.

"History haunts us all," Henry Kissinger said in an ironic reference to the days when the United States dominated the world organization on which it now urges moderation. Indeed it does, and none will be haunted more than those who act to destroy the U.N.'s effectiveness at the moment they need it most.

Aerosol Addicts

WASHINGTON — It used to be glue sniffing. Now it's aerosol sniffing.

The young and the poor, seeking a cheap "high," have taken to inhaling the toxic fumes of spray paints, hair sprays and deodorants out of aerosol cans.

It is a dangerous pastime, which kills about 125 young people every year. The fumes depress the central nervous system and can lead to nervous disorders, loss of memory and, occasionally, heart failure and death.

An unpublished study, conducted by Philip Vargas of the Drug Abuse Council, found that aerosol sniffing is popular "among the very poor, disenfranchised and marginal minority groups such as Chicano and Indian youngsters."

Government bureaucrats call it "solvent abuse." The back-alley users call it "huffing." One New Mexico doctor described it as "a poor man's marijuana."

But the consequences, according to the study, can be pathetic. Here are a few examples:

— "In Colorado," the study reports, "a mother told a community worker that her son even sleeps with a cloth sprayed with paint over his nose and that whenever she reprimands him for his sniffing, he threatens her and sometimes beats her."

— A 17-year-old was described by his teacher as "a very gentle boy" and a good student before he started sniffing. Now his probation officer says that "his eyes are always bloodshot and he has bluish-colored rings around his eyes and mouth. His speech has deteriorated and, at times, he is very hot-tempered and very nervous. He gets frustrated very easily and sometimes he is extremely violent."

— In Tucson, the researchers found a "four-year-old child of a chronic sniffer" who was introduced to sniffing by his father. "Rag, daddy. Rag, daddy," the little tyke cries, asking his father for another sniff.

— "My son has been sniffing paint from spray cans since he was 19," writes a mother. "My son is a very sick person and I just don't know how to deal with him any more. His mind is already so deteriorated I don't know if anything can be done for him."

For that matter, little is being done by the government for any of the aerosol addicts.

BOB CONSIDINE

Pretty Joe And Big B.

NEW YORK — Completely eclipsed by such historic current events as the All Star Game, Joe Namath's soul-searching decision to sell his pretty face to Fabergé for $5 million, Dear Ann Landers' fateful advice to herself to bounce her mate of many years, the proper pronunciation of Soyuz (. . . ooze), and whether to pay Richard Nixon $121,000 next year for not being president, was the anniversary of a little event that happened at Alamogordo, N.M., just 30 years before.

At dawn, July 16, 1945, the dim stilled desert was rent asunder by "the light of a thousand suns," and there spread over the scalded land a tidal wave of sound that was like a bellow from hell. Birth had been given to the most diabolical destructive force ever contrived by man — the atomic bomb.

Conscience-stricken over their contribution to the creation of the bomb, 60 of the scientists attempted to reach Gen. George C. Marshall (who was with President Truman at Potsdam) to beg of him not to use the bomb against Japanese civilian centers. An aide of Marshall brusquely dismissed their representatives.

They had come with options: 1) Tell the Japanese we had a terrible new bomb, so please surrender; 2) Ask them to clear Tokyo harbor and invite the emperor and his war advisers to assemble on shore and witness a demonstration of the bomb. When Marshall's aide laughed at the suggestion, one utterly serious scientist asked to be strapped to the first bomb that was dropped.

The bomb that dropped on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945, killed or wounded 130,000 and destroyed

90% of the city of 430,000. The Aug. 9 Nagasaki bomb, not properly fused nor adequately aimed (because the primary target that day was Kokura), nevertheless killed or wounded 75,000, and demolished a third of the city of 340,000.

The security that surrounded the birth and delivery of the only two nuclear bombs we ever employed made a mockery of the sieves of Watergate and its holey offshoots, the F.B.I., C.I.A., Justice, CREEP, the White House, etc. The sinking of the U.S.S. Indianapolis after it had delivered a small portion of the fissionable material for the Hiroshima bomb to Tinian, was hushed up for days.

Scientists working on the bomb were given code names and guarded night and day. One had a habit of walking across traffic-filled streets while deeply immersed in some far-out mathematical theorem.

A radio broadcaster who told his audience that we were on the verge of developing a bomb that would end the war was taken into custody within minutes after he signed off the air, warned sternly that he might be subject to years in prison and a $10,000 fine, then instructed to return to his job the next night . . . and never mention anything about a bomb again.

Librarians through the country were instructed to obtain the names and addresses of any person asking to see the Saturday Evening Post issue of the early 1940s which contained an article by William L. Laurence, the New York Times science writer, who had written that the atom could be split and release torrents of energy.

We put the Rosenbergs to death, convicted of passing atomic secrets to Russia, who came up with its own bomb in 1949. Klaus Fuchs, the young British-nationalized German spy who was cleared to work at Los Alamos (where even Sen. Harry S. Truman had been refused permission) supplied the Rosenbergs with their information mostly by way of a courier named Harry Gold. Caught and convicted under British law, Fuchs drew a maximum 14-year jail term, with time off for good behavior. How did he get to Los Alamos in the first place? Winston Churchill okayed the integrity of the entire British team of scientists on the ground that Britons never never could be slaves to an enemy.

Tempus fugit. We now give what once were broodingly called atomic secrets to 49 nations. Britain, France, the U.S.S.R., China and India have the bomb. It appears to be only a matter of time before Israel, a conglomerate of Arab states, Iran, and a couple of South American countries join the club. Atomic bills run into billions piled on billions. We and Russia can now kill everybody in our respective countries five times.

But who cares, as long as Joe Namath will smell sweet until 1995?

Debate Limited On Voting Act

Washington (UPI) — The senate Monday easily cleared the first hurdle in its race to enact a 10-year extension of the voting rights act before an Aug. 6 expiration deadline.

Crushing a threatened filibuster by southern senators, the Senate voted 72 to 19 to limit debate on the motion to take up a House-passed bill which would also permanently ban voter literacy tests of all kinds.

Nebraska Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska were among the 17 Republicans joined by seven Democrats opposing the limited debate.

Supporters got 12 more votes than the 60 needed to cut off debate. Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., voted present.

Democratic leader Mike Mansfield vowed to "go all the way" — including possible postponement of the Senate's scheduled August vacation — to pass the bill before Aug. 6.

The bill's foe, Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., accused the majority of "making political hay" out of it by "making the South the whipping boy." He did not have the votes to block the bill but made it clear he would use the rules to delay its consideration.

A second cloture vote will take place later this week to limit debate on the bill itself.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., praised the voting rights law, which presently covers seven southern states and sections of several others, as "the most successful civil rights act in history." He said that under its provisions one million blacks have been registered and 1,000 black officials have been elected in the states covered.

Sen. William L. Scott, R-Va., who fought the bill in the Judiciary Committee, said, "I hate to see old wounds opened and punitive legislation inflicted on the basis of the fact that they were 21 years ago. I think we should legislate on the facts as they are today."

The bill would substantially broaden the law to bring Spanish-speaking Americans and other minorities under its protections and require bilingual election assistance where there are large numbers of language minorities.

Under the president law federal examiners, poll waters and registrars are sent into states and election districts where discriminatory voting practices have occurred. Federal preclearance of any changes in a covered state or district's voting procedures is also required.

Prosecutors Call Last To Testify

Custer, S.D. (AP) — The prosecution in the trial of American Indian Movement (AIM) leader Dennis Banks called its last witness Monday, after nine days of testimony.

The prosecution called a total of 20 witnesses in building its case against Banks, charged in connection with a Feb. 6, 1973, melee in Custer. Most of the witnesses were present during the fracas and testified concerning their recollections.

The disturbance at the Custer County Courthouse left several persons injured and resulted in extensive property damage to several cars and buildings in Custer.

The last defense witness to be called was Patrick Tennyson, a Custer resident who took personal movies of the disturbance. Following his testimony, prosecution attorneys told Circuit Judge Marshall Young that they did not plan to call any further witnesses.

Tennyson told the court Monday that he saw Banks carrying a club during the disturbance. Tennyson also testified about the two movies he made of the events at the courthouse.

Tennyson said he saw Banks in several locations in Custer on the day of the disturbance, and he said he saw the AIM leader in possession of a riot club.

Banks faces several charges, stemming from the fracas, including a charge of riot while armed with a club, burglary, assault and arson.

Tennyson also said he identified Banks as being at the scene where an automobile was demolished by several persons.

Defense co-counsel John Flynn of Boston, Mass., objected to the showing of Tennyson's film, claiming that it was hearsay. However, Young overruled the objection and allowed the film to be introduced as evidence.

Also Monday, the prosecution and defense agreed on a chronological timetable of occurrences during the disturbance.

Several AIM members had come to Custer on the day of the disturbance to protest a manslaughter charge against a white man accused of killing an Indian. AIM said the charge should have been murder.

Fords Will Tour Europe's Capitals

Washington (AP) — President Ford will leave Saturday for a two-day visit in four European capitals and four days in Helsinki, Finland, for the European Security Conference summit meeting there.

The White House announced the dates for Ford's official visit at the invitation of the leaders of West Germany, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia.

President Ford and Mrs. Ford plan to spend July 26-28 in Bonn, West Germany, July 28-29 in Warsaw, Poland; Aug. 2-3 in Bucharest, Romania, and Aug. 3-4 in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

In between his visits to Poland and Romania, Ford will go to Helsinki for the 35-nation Security Conference to sign with other heads of state a final document drafted after two years of negotiation by the conference members. He is due to arrive in Helsinki July 29 and to remain through Aug. 1, Deputy Press Secretary William Greener said.

Ford's trip will take 10 days and is his second visit to Europe this year. He visited NATO countries in late May and early June. On that trip he went to Brussels, Madrid and Rome and met with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Salzburg, Austria.

Ford spent the last weekend before his trip on sports and relaxing at Camp David in the Maryland mountains.

Grand Jury Indicts Bunge Grain Firm

New Orleans (UPI) — A federal grand jury Monday indicted the Bunge Corp. of New York and 13 present or former corporate executives and employees on charges of conspiring to steal export grain and defraud the federal government.

The indictments accused the defendants of "conspiring from August 1961, to June 1973, to commit systematic theft of export grain from foreign commerce and to defraud the U.S. Department of Agriculture of its lawful grain regulatory functions."

The indictments were returned before U.S. District Judge Frederick J. R. Heebe. U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinhouse said they were the result of a 16-month grand jury investigation headed by Assistant U.S. Atty. Cornelius R. Hsusel.

The indictment charges Bunge and the 13 defendants stole grain by shortweighing ships at the company's export elevators in Destrehan, La., and Galveston, Tex., during the 12-year period.

The indictment also accuses the defendants with violating Agriculture Department regulations and provisions of the U.S. Warehouse Act.

Cited in the indictment were Bunge regional managers of the firm's Kansas City and St. Louis offices.

The indictment states the company shortweighed export shipments by issuing false weight certificates which overreported the true amount of grain in the shipment, usually by 2,000 bushels. The charge further states the defendants acted to conceal the issuing of the false weight certificates.

Joan Little Supported

A crowd of nearly 100 marched outside the Raleigh, N.C., courthouse Monday in support of Joan Little. Miss Little, a 21-year-old black woman, is accused of murdering a white jailer she says tried to rape her. Two more women were seated on the jury.

Tension High Despite Reports

By United Press International

Tensions on the Sinai front rose Monday despite widespread reports that Israel and Egypt were drawing closer to reaching a second-stage troop withdrawal agreement.

Government sources in Cairo said Egypt Monday night gave the United States its reaction to the latest Israeli proposals for a new interim peace agreement.

The sources said President Anwar Sadat conveyed Cairo's views at a meeting with U.S. Ambassador Hermann F. Eilts.

Israeli military sources said both Egypt and Israeli forces have stepped up their military activity as the July 24 deadline for the end of the mandate of the U.N. peacekeeping force in Sinai draws near.

"We're just watching out," an Israeli military source said. "The situation is quite delicate, although we've been through many other situations before the October (1973) War that were more delicate."

"The closer we get to the day the mandate expires, the more tension there is, even if it is only artificial tension."

The Cairo newspaper Al Gomhouria said Egyptian troops on the Suez Canal front fired 12 bursts of fire Sunday close to U.N. positions in the buffer zone. It quoted a U.N. officer as saying the incident underlined the escalating tension as the expiration of the U.N. mandate neared.

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Perez delivered a tough-line speech in Tel Aviv warning that Egypt's response to Israel's latest "very serious" proposals, delivered to Cairo over the weekend, would show Egypt's intentions.

"Israel wants to check if the way of peace is still open, and so we took upon ourselves one-sided concessions," he said.

In a warning to Egypt, he said, "If they decide to attack, we have the very real power to give them a serious lesson."

In the United Nations, diplomatic sources said the key to the renewal of the mandate of the peacekeeping force could be linked to Egypt's response to the new Israeli proposals.

A U.N. spokesman said Secretary Gen. Kurt Waldheim "hopes that it will be possible to work out a satisfactory arrangement" to keep the U.N. Sinai patrols in operation.

The 15-member U.N. Security Council privately discussed the next step for the peacekeeping force at a lunch Monday at the Italian mission to the United Nations, but it was not expected to convene officially until Tuesday.

The Beirut newspaper Al Anwar said both Egypt and Israel were in basic agreement on most of the peace proposals, except for the duration of the pact.

The Cairo sources said Egyptian President Sadat met Monday with his top aides to discuss the plan, delivered by hand Sunday night to Sadat by the American ambassador. There was no immediate Egyptian response.

The usually reliable Israeli newspaper Ha'aretz said the proposals included Israeli withdrawal from all but the eastern sliver of the controversial Mitla and Gidi Sinai mountain passes and an American-operated surveillance system.

Cairo government sources said the first indication of Egypt's reaction to the Israeli proposals may come in a major policy speech Sadat is scheduled to make Tuesday night at a meeting of the National Congress of the Arab Socialist Union, the nation's sole political party, marking the 23rd anniversary of the overthrow of the monarchy.

Despite the talk of peace, tensions increased on the Sinai front where the mandate for the U.N. peacekeeping force ends Thursday.

Israeli military sources said that both Egypt and Israel had stepped up their precautions in the sandy desert buffer zone but were at the same time respecting the disengagement agreement limiting armaments along the cease-fire line.

Egypt last week accused Israel of stalling on talks for a new settlement and said it would not renew the U.N. mandate unless there was further diplomatic movement toward ending Israel's occupation of Arab territories.

Debate Limited On Voting Act

Washington (UPI) — The senate Monday easily cleared the first hurdle in its race to enact a 10-year extension of the voting rights act before an Aug. 6 expiration deadline.

Crushing a threatened filibuster by southern senators, the Senate voted 72 to 19 to limit debate on the motion to take up a House-passed bill which would also permanently ban voter literacy tests of all kinds.

Nebraska Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska were among 17 Republicans joined by seven Democrats opposing the limited debate.

Supporters got 12 more votes than the 60 needed to cut off debate. Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., voted present.

Democratic leader Mike Mansfield vowed to "go all the way" — including possible postponement of the Senate's scheduled August vacation — to pass the bill before Aug. 6.

The bill's foe, Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., accused the majority of "making political hay" out of it by "making the South the whipping boy." He did not have the votes to block the bill but made it clear he would use the rules to delay its consideration.

A second cloture vote will take place later this week to limit debate on the bill itself.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., praised the voting rights law, which presently covers seven southern states and sections of several others, as "the most successful civil rights act in history." He said that under its provisions one million blacks have been registered and 1,000 black officials have been elected in the states covered.

Sen. William L. Scott, R-Va., who fought the bill in the Judiciary Committee, said, "I hate to see old wounds opened and punitive legislation inflicted on the basis of the fact as they were 21 years ago. I think we should legislate on the facts as they are today."

The bill would substantially broaden the law to bring Spanish-speaking Americans and other minorities under its protections and require bilingual election assistance where there are large numbers of language minorities.

Under the president law federal examiners, poll waters and registrars are sent into states and election districts where discriminatory voting practices have occurred. Federal preclearance of any changes in a covered state or district's voting procedures is also required.

Prosecutors Call Last To Testify

Custer, S.D. (AP) — The prosecution in the trial of American Indian Movement (AIM) leader Dennis Banks called its last witness Monday, after nine days of testimony.

The prosecution called a total of 20 witnesses in building its case against Banks, charged in connection with a Feb. 6, 1973, melee in Custer. Most of the witnesses were present during the fracas and testified concerning their recollections.

The disturbance at the Custer County Courthouse left several persons injured and resulted in extensive property damage to several cars and buildings in Custer.

The last defense witness to be called was Patrick Tennyson, a Custer resident who took personal movies of the disturbance. Following his testimony, prosecution attorneys told Circuit Judge Marshall Young that they did not plan to call any further witnesses.

Tennyson told the court Monday that he saw Banks carrying a club during the disturbance. Tennyson also testified about the two movies he made of the events at the courthouse.

Tennyson said he saw Banks in several locations in Custer on the day of the disturbance, and he said he saw the AIM leader in possession of a riot club.

Banks faces several charges, stemming from the fracas, including a charge of riot while armed with a club, burglary, assault and arson.

Tennyson also said he identified Banks as being at the scene where an automobile was demolished by several persons.

Defense co-counsel John Flynn of Boston, Mass., objected to the showing of Tennyson's film, claiming that it was hearsay. However, Young overruled the objection and allowed the film to be introduced as evidence.

Also Monday, the prosecution and defense agreed on a chronological timetable of occurrences during the disturbance.

Several AIM members had come to Custer on the day of the disturbance to protest a manslaughter charge against a white man accused of killing an Indian. AIM said the charge should have been murder.

Fords Will Tour Europe's Capitals

Washington (AP) — President Ford will leave Saturday for a two-day visit in four European capitals and four days in Helsinki, Finland, for the European Security Conference summit meeting there.

The White House announced the dates for Ford's official visit at the invitation of the leaders of West Germany, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia.

President Ford and Mrs. Ford plan to spend July 26-28 in Bonn, West Germany; July 28-29 in Warsaw, Poland; Aug. 2-3 in Bucharest, Romania, and Aug. 3-4 in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

In between his visits to Poland and Romania, Ford will go to Helsinki for the 35-nation Security Conference to sign with other heads of state a final document drafted after two years of negotiation by the conference members. He is due to arrive in Helsinki July 29 and to remain through Aug. 1, Deputy Press Secretary William Greener said.

Ford's trip will take 10 days and is his second visit to Europe this year. He visited NATO countries in late May and early June. On that trip he went to Brussels, Madrid and Rome and met with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Salzburg, Austria.

Ford spent the last weekend before his trip on sports and relaxing at Camp David in the Maryland mountains.

Grand Jury Indicts Bunge Grain Firm

New Orleans (UPI) — A federal grand jury Monday indicted the Bunge Corp. of New York and 13 present or former corporate executives and employees on charges of conspiring to steal export grain and defraud the federal government.

The indictments accused the defendants of "conspiring from August 1961, to June 1973, to commit systematic theft of export grain from foreign commerce and to defraud the U.S. Department of Agriculture of its lawful grain regulatory functions."

The indictments were returned before U.S. District Judge Frederick J. R. Heebe. U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinghouse said they were the result of a 16-month grand jury investigation headed by Assistant U.S. Atty. Cornelius R. Husel.

The indictment charges Bunge and the 13 defendants stole grain by shortweighing ships at the company's export elevators in Destrehan, La., and Galveston, Tex., during the 12-year period.

The indictment also accuses the defendants with violating Agriculture Department regulations and provisions of the U.S. Warehouse Act.

Cited in the indictment were Bunge regional managers of the firm's Kansas City and St. Louis offices.

The indictment states the company shortweighed export shipments by issuing false weight certificates which overreported the true amount of grain in the shipment, usually by 2,000 bushels. The charge further states the defendants acted to conceal the issuing of the false weight certificates.

Tension High Despite Reports

By United Press International

Tensions on the Sinai front rose Monday despite widespread reports that Israel and Egypt were drawing closer to reaching a second-stage troop withdrawal agreement.

Government sources in Cairo said Egypt Monday night gave the United States its reaction to the latest Israeli proposals for a new interim peace agreement.

The sources said President Anwar Sadat conveyed Cairo's views at a meeting with U.S. Ambassador Hermann F. Eilts.

Israeli military sources said both Egypt and Israeli forces have stepped up their military activity as the July 24 deadline for the end of the mandate of the U.N. peacekeeping force in Sinai draws near.

"We're just watching out," an Israeli military source said. "The situation is quite delicate, although we've been through many other situations before the October (1973) War that were more delicate."

"The closer we get to the day the mandate expires, the more tension there is, even if it is only artificial tension."

The Cairo newspaper Al Gomhuria said Egyptian troops on the Suez Canal front fired 12 bursts of fire Sunday close to U.N. positions in the buffer zone. It quoted a U.N. officer as saying the incident underlined the escalating tension as the expiration of the U.N. mandate neared.

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Perez delivered a tough-line speech in Tel Aviv warning that Egypt's response to Israel's latest "very serious" proposals, delivered to Cairo over the weekend, would show Egypt's intentions.

"Israel wants to check if the way of peace is still open, and so we took upon ourselves one-sided concessions," he said.

In a warning to Egypt, he said, "If they decide to attack, we have the very real power to give them a serious lesson."

In the United Nations, diplomatic sources said the key to the renewal of the mandate of the peacekeeping force could be linked to Egypt's response to the new Israeli proposals.

A U.N. spokesman said Secretary Gen. Kurt Waldheim "hopes that it will be possible to work out a satisfactory arrangement" to keep the U.N. Sinai patrols in operation.

The 15-member U.N. Security Council privately discussed the next step for the peacekeeping force at a lunch Monday at the Italian mission to the United Nations, but it was not expected to convene officially until Tuesday.

The Beirut newspaper Al Anwar said both Egypt and Israel were in basic agreement on most of the peace proposals, except for the duration of the pact.

The Cairo sources said Egyptian President Sadat met Monday with his top aides to discuss the plan, delivered by hand Sunday night to Sadat by the American ambassador. There was no immediate Egyptian response.

The usually reliable Israeli newspaper Ha'aretz said the proposals included Israeli withdrawal from all but the eastern sliver of the controversial Mitla and Gidi Sinai mountain passes and an American-operates surveillance system.

Cairo government sources said the first indication of Egypt's reaction to the Israeli proposals may come in a major policy speech Sadat is scheduled to make Tuesday night at a meeting of the National Congress of the Arab Socialist Union, the nation's sole political party, marking the 23rd anniversary of the overthrow of the monarchy.

Despite the talk of peace, tensions increased on the Siani front where the mandate for the U.N. peacekeeping force ends Thursday.

Israeli military sources said that both Egypt and Israel had stepped up their precautions in the sandy desert buffer zone but were at the same time respecting the disengagement agreement limiting armaments along the cease-fire line.

Egypt last week accused Israel of stalling on talks for a new settlement and said it would not renew the U.N. mandate unless there was further diplomatic movement toward ending Israel's occupation of Arab territories.

City Not Ready To Aid Bicentennial Projects

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

City lawmakers are ready to be engaged to a city bicentennial project, but they're not ready to march down the aisle and tie the knot.

The hesitant City Council said Monday it wants more information before endorsing the Lincoln Bicentennial Committee's proposed projects -- the old Federal Building, the old City Hall and a performing arts center.

Council members called the renovation of the two buildings laudable, but said the city may not be able to afford the projects.

Three Proposals

Bicentennial Committee Chairwoman Barb Henderson said the group is looking for a monetary commitment from the city. The committee is proposing that the city take on the following as bicentennial projects.

—lease 48,600 square feet of office space on the upper floors of the old Federal Building, between 9th and 10th on P St. — appropriate money to restore the old City Hall to its original interior to be used for exhibits or as an information center —cooperate with the Lincoln Foundation and other private donors and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in constructing a performing arts center on the first and second levels of the old Federal Building.

Mrs. Henderson said the price tag on the old Federal Building is reportedly $775,000. It would cost another $500,000 to install central air conditioning there and $500,000 to bring the building up to city codes.

No Cost Estimate

She had no cost estimates yet for remodeling the old City Hall or building the arts center.

If the city doesn't buy the old Federal Building, the Lincoln Foundation has indicated it would buy the building and rent space to the city. However, who would foot the bill for remodeling costs hasn't been decided.

That uncertainty prompted

Councilman Max Denney to compare the council to the unwilling bridegroom and the proposed projects to the bride.

"You're asking us to march down the aisle without even knowing what she looks like," Denney quipped.

How Much Dowry?

To which Councilwoman Sue Bailey added, "Mr. Denney, the question is how much money does she have in her dowry, not what she looks like."

The council decided to delay action on the matter to get more information on the project, which is endorsed by Mayor Helen Boosalis.

In other business, the council appointed Dr. Norman Carlson to the City-County Health Board for a term expiring in 1978.

The council also granted permission to Miller and Paine Co. to install a six-inch steam line under O St. between the department store and the National Bank of Commerce. The bank will supply steam heat to Miller and Paine after the city discontinues that service in 1978.

In further action, the council:

Ordinances, Third Reading

—Corrected legal description of portion of 72nd south of Custer and north of Webster vacated by ordinance passed on April 21.

—Corrected legal description of portion of 71st south of Custer and north of Webster approved for sale by council on April 21.

Resolutions and Public Hearings

—Defeated application of Russell Raybould to adjust front yard for B & R IGA at 18th and Washington.

—Approved construction of sidewalks located on west side of 62nd between Fremont and Seward Ave. and located on east side of 62nd and Seward Ave.

—Authorized city to executive contract with U.S. government for transit technical studies grant for $26,000.

Ordinances, First Reading

—Creating paving district in N.W. 10th lying between south line of W. Dawes Ave. and north line of W. Saunders Ave.

—Amending ordinance passed May 14, 1973, creating sewer district by extending limits of district to include additional benefited real estate and declaring an emergency, approximately 200 feet east of 62nd, Newton to Normal.

Office Rearranged

A driverless semi-tractor trailer smashed into the office of Security Services at 111 S. 25th Monday morning. The semi, which rolled west across 25th from a Hinky-Dinky store on the other side of 25th, completely bashed in the front of the office and knocked a desk through an interior wall. Art Aksamit, left, owner of the business, and secretary Marsha Sexton, spent the day cleaning up. A temporary front was quickly installed to protect the office. No one was in the office when the incident occurred at about 7:15 a.m. Aksamit said the damage would be in the thousands, noting that the cost of camera equipment and an adding machine alone pushed the total past $4,000. # Lincoln's Kawasaki Plant Featured In Monitor Story

Lincoln's new Kawasaki plant was featured in the Friday, July 18, edition of the Christian Science Monitor.

The Monitor's article, written by Norman Sklarewitz, pointed out that Lincoln was chosen by Kawasaki Heavy Industries of Tokyo because of savings in transportation and tariffs, greater effectiveness in supplying the overseas market and the comparatively lower cost of labor and higher productivity possible in an ultra-modern American plant.

Kawasaki's Lincoln workers are paid $3.35 an hour and gross about $580 a month. Employee benefits provided by Kawasaki include company-paid health care, life insurance and a retirement plan fully vested after 10 years of service.

Japanese workers earn about $500 a month, but receive additional fringe benefits American employees don't get, Sklarewitz said.

Kawasaki in Tokyo pays for a worker's monthly train commuter ticket, provides him with his official gray company work uniform and safety shoes and subsidizes the company lunch room so that a lunch costs him only 18 cents.

Kawasaki also loans employees money for homes at only 5% interest, Sklarewitz said.

When Japanese Kawasaki employees take vacations, they can stay at any one of eight Kawasaki-owned resort hotels for $12 a day — two meals included.

The Monitor said, "when calculated into the cost of producing a KZ-400 series motorcycle, the labor component in the U.S. amounts to about 5%, whereas in Japan it comes out at about 7%."

With these figures in mind, Kawasaki scouted for a plant site in the U.S., and Lincoln fitted the firm's needs perfectly, the Extra books will be sold at 8 p.m. for $8.

Crime Increase In Lincoln Less Than National Rate

The number of serious crimes in the state's two largest cities — Lincoln and Omaha — did not match the national percentage increase of 18%, according to U.S. Department of Justice figures released Monday.

Crime in Lincoln rose only 2% during the first three months of 1975 and crime in Omaha rose only 4%, according to the figures.

Nationally the figures showed that robbery increased 28%, aggravated assault 10%, murder 7%, and forcible rape 4%. Property crimes also were up 18%. Burglary rose 20%, larceny-theft 19%, and motor vehicle theft increased 6%.

Law enforcement agencies in the rural areas reported a 21% rise in the volume of crime. Suburban areas reported an increase of 19%. Cities with 100,000 or more inhabitants reported a 17% increase.

Geographically, the Northeastern States reported a 21% increase in crime. Crime in the Southern States was up 20%, the North Central States 17%, and the Western States 13%.

Calling the latest figures "one of the terrifying facts of life, which we have come to accept as normal, and which we must not accept as normal," Attorney General Edward H. Levi said they again demonstrate the need for major new programs at all levels of government.

"Currently law enforcement is solving only about one of five known serious crimes," Mr. Levi said. "But of even greater concern is the downgrading of charges from felonies to misdemeanors at the prosecution stage, regardless of the defendant's past criminal record."

In Lincoln the number of reported serious crimes went from 1,452 to 1,483. In Omaha the total went from 4,899 to 5,137.

The Lincoln figures by category, listing the 1974 figures

first and the 1975 figures second, were: murder, nonnegligent manslaughter, 3 and 1; forcible rape, 8 and 8; robbery 10 and 17; aggravated assault 47 and 87; burglary, breaking or entering, 266 and 265; larceny-theft, 1,043 and 1,036; motor vehicle theft 75 and 69.

The Omaha statistics were: murder, nonnegligent manslaughter, 9 and 11; forcible rape, 37 and 42; robbery, 234 and 391; aggravated assault, 182 and 232; burglary, breaking or entering, 1,376 and 1,316; larceny-theft, 2,428 and 2,707; motor vehicle theft 633 and 437.

School-Age Children To Get Dental Checks

School-age children across the state will be screened for dental problems during the coming school year.

Dr. James Hull, director of the dental health division for the State Health Department, and Dr. Earl Person, an Omaha dentist representing the Nebraska Dental Association, are coordinating plans for the first statewide look at the dental problems of children.

Although many of the details remain to be worked out, Dr. Hull said the screening will proceed on a county-by-county basis.

"We're still in the early phases, but we'll be calling on dentists across the state to make it a success," he said.

"We're not just going to be doing this for statistics," Dr. Hull said. "Parents will be notified" about any serious dental problems their children may have, he said.

One target of the screening will be children in what Dr. Hull calls "the gray zone" — those children who for various reasons do not receive regular dental care.

Most often the families of those in the gray zone are not eligible to receive treatment through some form of public welfare but who still cannot afford proper care.

Nemaha County, he noted, is the first county in the state where children of "gray zone" families are being given comprehensive dental care through age 19.

Also this September, free dental care will be available for some 3,000 migrant farm workers in western Nebraska through the State Health Department's regional clinic being constructed in Scottsbluff.

Through a $50,000 federal grant, the clinic will have two dentists to serve migrants whose major dental problem is that they receive little preventive dental care.

"One of the problems is that they have no regular place to go (for care)," Dr. Hull said.

Some LT&T Customers Still Without Telephones

All telephone cables damaged in Saturday's storm have been repaired, but about 100 Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. customers still were without service Monday night because of downed lines, an LT&T spokesman said.

The spokesman said these 100 customers had downed drop lines, the lines running from nearby power poles to the individual houses.

LT&T crews were working to repair the lines Monday night, but the spokesman said a few customers would probably remain without service until early Tuesday.

An LT&T employee was listed in satisfactory condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center Monday after receiving electrical burns Sunday.

Charles Williams, 24, of 2002 N. 68th, was repairing storm damage at 13th and F Sts. in a manlift when power lines began sparking, according to police reports.

Williams jumped from the manlift, receiving a cut over the eye. He suffered burns on his thighs.

Tear Gas Fails To Stop Theft

Strong-willed burglars made off with more than $300 despite setting off a tear gas bomb when they tried to open a safe at Jacobs Service, Inc., 1501 N. 17th.

Police said the smell of the gas was still strong in the building when they arrived to investigate Sunday morning.

The burglars rolled the safe outdoors after setting off the tear gas bomb.

Mayor Uses First Veto To Block Zoning Change

Mayor Helen Boosalis has issued her first veto of a City Council action since taking office May 19.

The mayor vetoed the council's approval July 7 of J. L. Krause's application for a change of zone from AA Rural to K Light Industry, located on the north side of South St. and west of S.W. 1st. About three acres of land was involved in the rezoning.

Mrs. Boosalis said she rejected the council's action on the grounds that the parcel is just one small part of some 200 acres of agriculturally zoned land in west Lincoln. She said the land should remain in that zoning category since the land is important for the development of the Crescent Greens park system.

The mayor said the land also is "strategically located in regards to the movement of people to the west of town."

The council did not attempt to override the veto Monday.

Xerox To Drop Computer Line

New York (AP) — Xerox Corp., a leading manufacturer of copiers, said it plans to get out of the computer manufacturing business it paid nearly $1 billion to enter six years ago.

Xerox set aside a provision of $84 million from second quarter earnings to cover its costs of ending the operation, which it expects to complete within a year.

Office Rearranged

A driverless semi-tractor trailer smashed into the office of Security Services at 111 S. 25th Monday morning. The semi, which rolled west across 25th from a Hinky-Dinky store on the other side of 25th, completely bashed in the front of the office and knocked a desk through an interior wall. Art Aksamit, left, owner of the business, and secretary Marsha Sexton, spent the day cleaning up. A temporary front was quickly installed to protect the office. No one was in the office when the incident occurred at about 7:15 a.m. Aksamit said the damage would be in the thousands, noting that the cost of camera equipment and an adding machine alone pushed the total past $4,000. ## Lincoln's Kawasaki Plant Featured In Monitor Story

Lincoln's new Kawasaki plant was featured in the Friday, July 18, edition of the Christian Science Monitor.

The Monitor's article, written by Norman Sklarewitz, pointed out that Lincoln was chosen by Kawasaki Heavy Industries of Tokyo because of savings in transportation and tariffs, greater effectiveness in supplying the overseas market and the comparatively lower cost of labor and higher productivity possible in an ultra-modern American plant.

Kawasaki's Lincoln workers are paid $3.35 an hour and gross about $580 a month. Employee benefits provided by Kawasaki include company-paid health care, life insurance and a retirement plan fully vested after 10 years of service.

Japanese workers earn about $500 a month, but receive additional fringe benefits American employees don't get, Sklarewitz said.

Kawasaki in Tokyo pays for a worker's monthly train commuter ticket, provides him with his official gray company work uniform and safety shoes and subsidizes the company lunch room so that a lunch costs him only 18 cents.

Kawasaki also loans employees money for homes at only 5% interest, Sklarewitz said.

When Japanese Kawasaki employees take vacations, they can stay at any one of eight Kawasaki-owned resort hotels for $12 a day — two meals included.

The Monitor said, "when calculated into the cost of producing a KZ-400 series motorcycle, the labor component in the U.S. amounts to about 5%, whereas in Japan it comes out at about 7%."

With these figures in mind, Kawasaki scouted for a plant site in the U.S., and Lincoln fitted the firm's needs perfectly, the

Crime Increase In Lincoln Less Than National Rate

The number of serious crimes in the state's two largest cities — Lincoln and Omaha — did not match the national percentage increase of 18%, according to U.S. Department of Justice figures released Monday.

Crime in Lincoln rose only 2% during the first three months of 1975 and crime in Omaha rose only 4%, according to the figures.

Nationally the figures showed that robbery increased 28%, aggravated assault 10%, murder 7%, and forcible rape 4%. Property crimes also were up 18%. Burglary rose 20%, larceny-theft 19%, and motor vehicle theft increased 6%.

Law enforcement agencies in the rural areas reported a 21% rise in the volume of crime. Suburban areas reported an increase of 19%. Cities with 100,000 or more inhabitants reported a 17% increase.

Geographically, the Northeastern States reported a 21% increase in crime. Crime in the Southern States was up 20%, the North Central States 17%, and the Western States 13%.

Calling the latest figures "one of the terrifying facts of life, which we have come to accept as normal, and which we must not accept as normal," Attorney General Edward H. Levi said they again demonstrate the need for major new programs at all levels of government.

"Currently law enforcement is solving only about one of five known serious crimes," Mr. Levi said. "But of even greater concern is the downgrading of charges from felonies to misdemeanors at the prosecution stage, regardless of the defendant's past criminal record."

In Lincoln the number of reported serious crimes went from 1,452 to 1,483. In Omaha the total went from 4,899 to 5,137.

The Lincoln figures by category, listing the 1974 figures

first and the 1975 figures second, were: murder, nonnegligent manslaughter, 3 and 1; forcible rape, 8 and 8; robbery 10 and 17; aggravated assault 47 and 87; burglary, breaking or entering, 266 and 265; larceny-theft, 1,043 and 1,036; motor vehicle theft 75 and 69.

The Omaha statistics were: murder, nonnegligent manslaughter, 9 and 11; forcible rape, 37 and 42; robbery, 234 and 391; aggravated assault, 182 and 232; burglary, breaking or entering, 1,376 and 1,316; larceny-theft, 2,428 and 2,707; motor vehicle theft 633 and 437.

School-Age Children To Get Dental Checks

School-age children across the state will be screened for dental problems during the coming school year.

Dr. James Hull, director of the dental health division for the State Health Department, and Dr. Earl Person, an Omaha dentist representing the Nebraska Dental Association, are coordinating plans for the first statewide look at the dental problems of children.

Although many of the details remain to be worked out, Dr. Hull said the screening will proceed on a county-by-county basis.

"We're still in the early phases, but we'll be calling on dentists across the state to make it a success," he said.

"We're not just going to be doing this for statistics," Dr. Hull said. "Parents will be notified" about any serious dental problems their children may have, he said.

One target of the screening will be children in what Dr. Hull calls "the gray zone" — those children who for various reasons do not receive regular dental care.

Most often the families of those in the gray zone are not eligible to receive treatment through some form of public welfare but who still cannot afford proper care.

Nemaha County, he noted, is the first county in the state where children of "gray zone" families are being given comprehensive dental care through age 19.

Also this September, free dental care will be available for some 3,000 migrant farm workers in western Nebraska through the State Health Department's regional clinic being constructed in Scottsbluff.

Through a $50,000 federal grant, the clinic will have two dentists to serve migrants whose major dental problem is that they receive little preventive dental care.

"One of the problems is that they have no regular place to go (for care)," Dr. Hull said.

Some LT&T Customers Still Without Telephones

All telephone cables damaged in Saturday's storm have been repaired, but about 100 Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. customers still were without service Monday night because of downed lines, an LT&T spokesman said.

The spokesman said these 100 customers had downed drop lines, the lines running from nearby power poles to the individual houses.

LT&T crews were working to repair the lines Monday night, but the spokesman said a few customers would probably remain without service until early Tuesday.

An LT&T employee was listed in satisfactory condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center Monday after receiving electrical burns Sunday.

Charles Williams, 24, of 2002 N. 68th, was repairing storm

damage at 13th and F Sts. in a manlift when power lines began sparking, according to police reports.

Williams jumped from the manlift, receiving a cut over the eye. He suffered burns on his thighs.

Tear Gas Fails To Stop Theft

Strong-willed burglars made off with more than $300 despite setting off a tear gas bomb when they tried to open a safe at Jacobs Service, Inc., 1501 N. 17th.

Police said the smell of the gas was still strong in the building when they arrived to investigate Sunday morning.

The burglars rolled the safe outdoors after setting off the tear gas bomb.

Mayor Uses First Veto To Block Zoning Change

Mayor Helen Boosalis has issued her first veto of a City Council action since taking office May 19.

The mayor vetoed the council's approval July 7 of J. L. Krause's application for a change of zone from AA Rural to K Light Industry, located on the north side of South St. and west of S.W. 1st. About three acres of land was involved in the rezoning.

Mrs. Boosalis said she rejected the council's action on the grounds that the parcel is just one small part of some 200 acres of agriculturally zoned land in west Lincoln. She said the land should remain in that zoning category since the land is important for the development of the Crescent Greens park system.

The mayor said the land also is "strategically located in regards to the movement of people to the west of town."

The council did not attempt to override the veto Monday.

New York (AP) — Xerox Corp., a leading manufacturer of copies, said it plans to get out of the computer manufacturing business it paid nearly $1 billion to enter six years ago.

Xerox set aside a provision of $84 million from second quarter earnings to cover its costs of ending the operation, which it expects to complete within a year.

POSTCARD

by

Devon — Rain has been sweeping across southwest England. From ancient Plymouth up to the moors, all rust-brown with splashes of butter-yellow gorse at this time of year.

The rain puts a mist on the English moors. They are wild, lonely patches. A few gray rocks rising from a land sea of brown bracken and last year's heather.

"I should dodge around Dartmoor if I were you," said the man who sold me gas—oops, petrol. "Nothing to see in this weather." He eyed me carefully to see how much he could put me on. He then added soberly, "Except escaped prisoners."

I write on the dining room table at the Cott Inn. In Devon, the south of England.

The roof is thatch. The beam ceiling barely clears your head. The pub is all shining brass and copper and dark polished wood. It was built in 1320 — an eight-year-old inn when the Black Death killed half of England.

The barmaid is from nearby Brixham. "Where the Mayflower was built. They say the American accent is from the Devon accent."

The birthplace of sailors: Drake and Hawkins were Devon men.

The Cott Inn is 655 years old.

Dartmoor holds the famous English prison. A favorite of movies and TV plots where the prisoner gets away in the moor's mist.

"Quite armless, most of the lot," said the gas station man. "Even the murderers. Come up to your car and ask directions for the escape."

"Like bears in Yellowstone Park?" I suggested.

"Exactly," said the gas station man. "Sometimes they 'ave to wye for the pictures to be tyken for the telly."

For very little money, two people can take a seven-day pub tour of England. Your own car. Stopping at ancient coaching inns.

So the other day I drove out of London — learning that left-side-of-the-road again. (It's a little jumpy the first hour. By then you've got it.)

It was raining, of course. The rain in England falls mainly on me.

"Though it was fine yesterday," said the lady owner of The Vine at Stockbridge. (It's always fine — yesterday.)

The Vine is a few hundred years old itself.

It is on the river Test. The best trout fishing river in all England. The watercress was crisp, fresh from the river. A tweedy squire type with red mutton chop whiskers was drinking pink gins at the bar. Complaining of weather and taxes.

The road to Devon is narrow. Mostly two-lane. It runs over wonderful rolling English downs.

Past the great Druid stones on a lonely plain at Stonehenge.

Through towns of Saxon names with Norman gates and towers.

It followed the Roman road to Exeter — the Romans called it Isca Dumnoniorum.

The Saxons called it Escancestre. (Roman names didn't stick on Britain.)

The Danish Vikings plundered it twice. History lies on the country as rich as Devon cream.

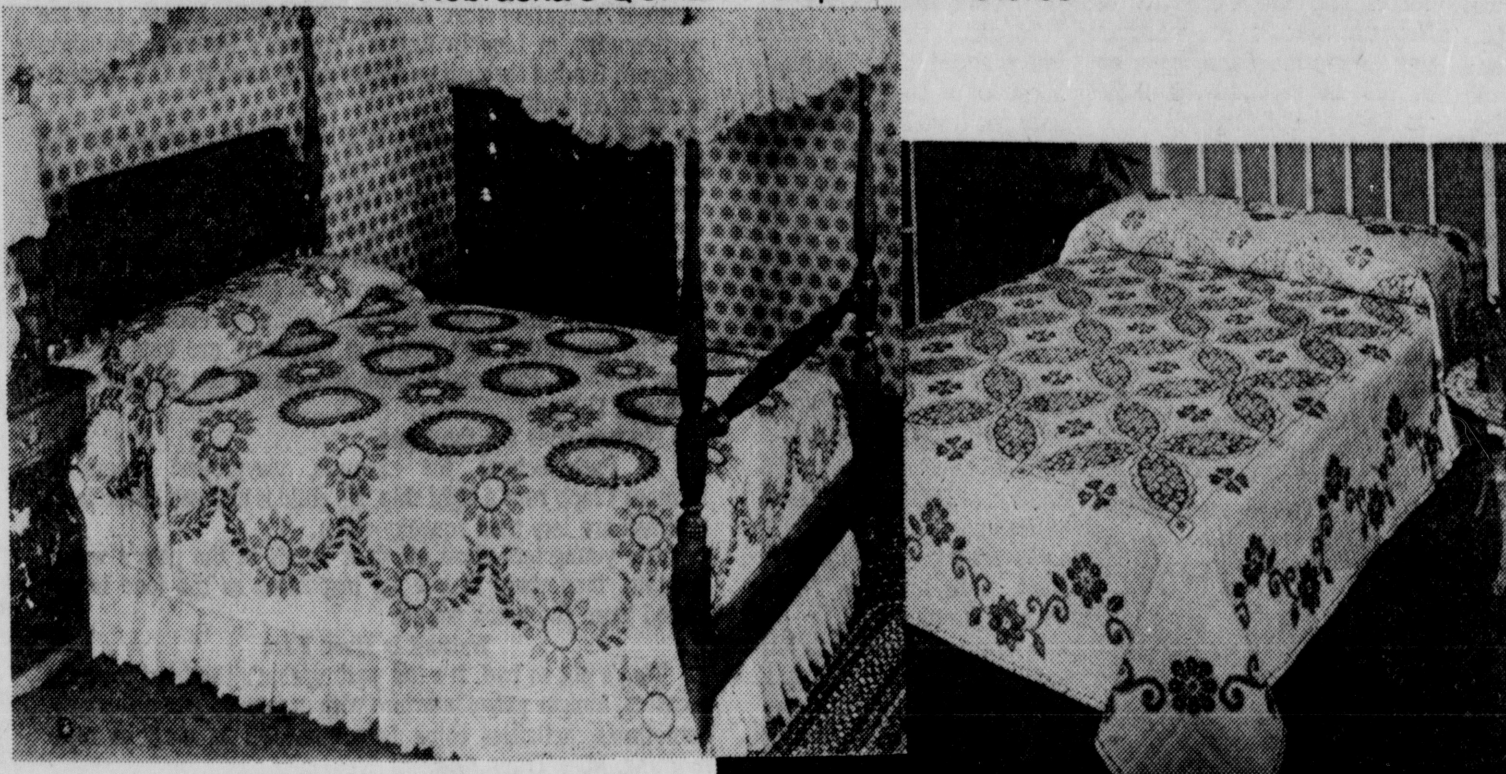

At the ancient Cott Inn, there was a warm bar, already full. For England gets into the beer early in the evening.

There was hot duck for dinner. And when I got into bed under the low beam ceiling, I was happy as any customer of the Cott Inn in 655 years.

Hunger It Doesn't Go On Vacation

BALANCED LUNCHES ... provided by grant from USDA.

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The park was full of them, kids running here and there, taking turns on the hula hoop, swinging, twirling on the merry-go-round.

One by one, they stopped playing to look longingly toward the corner.

They were on the lookout for the dark brown van that comes around each day during the noon hour.

Summer Nutrition

The children, some 150 strong, are scattered around at four summer recreation sites. All from low-income homes, they are participating in Lincoln Action Program's Summer Nutrition program funded through an $8,400 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The cold lunch program is aimed at "supplementing the kids' nutritional needs usually met during the school year" by Title I hot lunches, said Lynn Tierney, LAP's planning officer.

Don't Have Food

"You'd be surprised the kids that don't get meals at lunch time simply because their parents don't have" the food, said Doris Collins, LAP public relations/volunteer coordinator.

The recreation and nutrition programs are held at four sites: Belmont, Park and Clinton Schools and the playground at 20th and U Sts.

No two sites are the same.

At Park School, for example, playground supervisor Frances Trapp runs a tight ship. No child is allowed at the table if hands are less than squeaky clean.

The youngsters rinse off their hands in the park's water fountain, then stand in line for inspection as the food is unloaded from the lunch wagon.

Waiting Is Hard Part

That's not so bad. It's the waiting that's the hard part. On occasion, hunger pangs interfere with organized group sessions. Sometimes, activities come to a standstill as early as mid-morning, Miss Trapp said.

When it's just about time for the truck to round the corner, Miss Trapp and her assistant are besieged with a thousand and one questions.

"When are they coming?" ask the kids at regular intervals. Other queries are more original: "Where are they packed?" "Who makes the sandwiches?" "Wonder what kind of sandwich it'll be today." Speculation is the name of the lunch time game.

The meals are prepared at Grace United Methodist Church by two women who manage the cafeteria at a local parochial school.

The brown bag lunches are different each day but they're all nutritionally balanced to conform to USDA specifications: two ounces of meat or egg, vegetable, fruit and milk, the planning officer said.

Thrown in for good measure are potato chips, cookies, pie or some other treat.

That's the best part, the kids agreed. Not a morsel goes uneaten.

HUNGRY CHILDREN ... show no hesitation in digging in.

The bidding.

Opening lead — king of hearts.

The coup en passant is a relatively simple play by which an apparently certain loser is made to disappear. But, like many other so-called advanced plays, the term used to describe it is more frightening than the genuine article itself.

Let's say you're South and get to three clubs. The contract seems easy enough to make when dummy comes down, but when West starts out with the K-A and a low heart, which you ruff, and you lead the ace of clubs, the outlook changes drastically.

When West shows out, it seems you must go down one — losing two hearts, a diamond and two clubs. But actually, with careful play, you can save a trick and make the contract.

You play a spade to the king and ruff dummy's last heart, followed by a spade to the ace and a spade ruff. By this time you've won six tricks and have the Q-8 of diamonds and K-7-6 of clubs left.

You now play a diamond to the ace and lead dummy's last spade. If East discards, you ruff with the six to achieve your ninth trick. If East ruffs, you discard the queen of diamonds, thus combining a diamond loser and a trump loser on one trick and so making the contract.

This play of the last spade from dummy to score an extra trump trick is called a coup en passant. You score the trick while passing by East, who finds himself helpless in the matter.

In effect, you score the A-K of spades, ace of diamonds and six trump tricks on the hand — even though East scores his two natural trump tricks. Your sixth trump trick somehow sprouts out of thin air.

Grades Are Tip-Off That Firm Hand Needed

DEAR ABBY I have two teenagers, ages 14 and 16. Their father and I divorced five years ago and both remarried. For years, the children have been begging me to let them live with their father because they felt that their stepfather and I were too strict. Also, their real father promised them the moon.

Last year, I let them go on the condition that they keep their grades up (both were honor students) and continue their confirmation classes.

Well, they are flunking in school and have practically dropped out of confirmation class (They also let four years of music lessons go down the drain).

I know they prefer living with their father because he doesn't discipline them at all. When they came home, my daughter had so much makeup on I didn't recognize her.

Should I let them go back with their father, or should I insist that they stay with me until they finish high school? My husband has been a wonderful stepfather, although they never showed him the proper respect. He is willing to have them back if I say so.

I know it will be difficult if they return, but I hate to see them ruin their lives because I know they will regret it later.

Please advise me MOM

DEAR MOM: Bring them home. Their grades are sufficient evidence to justify it. These are important years. They desperately need a firm hand, guidance and discipline. They'll thank you later. And if they don't, at least you'll know that you did all you could for them.

DEAR ABBY: I could not leave unanswered your reply to "Nameless," whose wife made several suicide attempts.

My mother died a natural death two years ago. My father died last month at 73 of carbon-monoxide poisoning.

I am proud to say that he finished the last page of his long "note" on the night before he died, after dictating it to his best friend. On Sunday morning, my two daughters and I arrived at his home for a lunch date to find the sheriff and coroner there.

My family will bear its share of guilt for not preventing his death — each in his and her own way. But I say, "Greater love hath no man."

He did not want to live on as a vegetable, he left a six-page letter of explanation in lovely, lucid English.

I miss both my parents. But I honor their memory in the only way I know. I share their love with all other living things. That is their legacy to me. And if I am lucky, my three children will share this love with the family of man.

You may use my name.

Hunger It Doesn't Go On Vacation

BALANCED LUNCHES ... provided by grant from USDA.

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The park was full of them, kids running here and there, taking turns on the hula hoop, swinging, twirling on the merry-go-round.

One by one, they stopped playing to look longingly toward the corner.

Summer Nutrition

The children, some 150 strong, are scattered around at four summer recreation sites. All from low-income homes, they are participating in Lincoln Action Program's Summer Nutrition program funded through an $8,400 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The cold lunch program is aimed at "supplementing the kids' nutritional needs usually met during the school year" by Title I hot lunches, said Lynn Tierney, LAP's planning officer.

Don't Have Food

"You'd be surprised the kids that don't get meals at lunch time simply because their parents don't have" the food, said Doris Collins, LAP public relations/volunteer coordinator.

The recreation and nutrition programs are held at four sites: Belmont, Park and Clinton Schools and the playground at 20th and U Sts.

No two sites are the same.

At Park School, for example, playground supervisor Frances Trapp runs a tight ship. No child is allowed at the table if hands are less than squeaky clean.

The youngsters rinse off their hands in the park's water fountain, then stand in line for inspection as the food is unloaded from the lunch wagon.

Waiting Is Hard Part

That's not so bad. It's the waiting that's the hard part. On occasion, hunger pangs interfere with organized group sessions. Sometimes, activities come to a standstill as early as mid-morning, Miss Trapp said.

When it's just about time for the truck to round the corner, Miss Trapp and her assistant are besieged with a thousand and one questions.

"When are they coming?" ask the kids at regular intervals.

Other queries are more original: "Where are they packed?" "Who makes the sandwiches?" "Wonder what kind of sandwich it'll be today." Speculation is the name of the lunch time game.

The meals are prepared at Grace United Methodist Church by two women who manage the cafeteria at a local parochial school.

The brown bag lunches are different each day but they're all nutritionally balanced to conform to USDA specifications: two ounces of meat or egg, vegetable, fruit and milk, the planning officer said.

Thrown in for good measure are potato chips, cookies, pie or some other treat.

That's the best part, the kids agreed. Not a morsel goes uneaten.

Opening lead — king of hearts.

The coup en passant is a relatively simple play by which an apparently certain loser is made to disappear. But, like many other so-called advanced plays, the term used to describe it is more frightening than the genuine article itself.

Let's say you're South and get to three clubs. The contract seems easy enough to make when dummy comes down, but when West starts out with the K-A and a low heart, which you ruff, and you lead the ace of clubs, the outlook changes drastically.

When West shows out, it seems you must go down one — losing two hearts, a diamond and two clubs. But actually, with careful play, you can save a trick and make the contract.

You play a spade to the king and ruff dummy's last heart, followed by a spade to the ace and a spade ruff. By this time you've won six tricks and have the Q-8 of diamonds and K-7-6 of clubs left.

You now play a diamond to the ace and lead dummy's last spade. If East discards, you ruff with the six to achieve your ninth trick. If East ruffs, you discard the queen of diamonds, thus combining a diamond loser and a trump loser on one trick and so making the contract.

This play of the last spade from dummy to score an extra trump trick is called a coup en passant. You score the trick while passing by East, who finds himself helpless in the matter.

In effect, you score the A-K of spades, ace of diamonds and six trump tricks on the hand — even though East scores his two natural trump tricks. Your sixth trump trick somehow sprouts out of thin air.

Grades Are Tip-Off That Firm Hand Needed

DEAR ABBY: I have two teenagers, ages 14 and 16. Their father and I divorced five years ago and both remarried. For years, the children have been begging me to let them live with their father because they felt that their stepfather and I were too strict. Also, their real father promised them the moon.

Last year, I let them go on the condition that they keep their grades up (both were honor students) and continue their confirmation classes.

Well, they are flunking in school and have practically dropped out of confirmation class. (They also let four years of music lessons go down the drain.)

I know they prefer living with their father because he doesn't discipline them at all. When they came home, my daughter had so much makeup on I didn't recognize her.

Should I let them go back with their father, or should I insist that they stay with me until they finish high school? My husband has been a wonderful stepfather, although they never showed him the proper respect. He is willing to have them back if I say so.

I know it will be difficult if they return, but I hate to see them ruin their lives because I know they will regret it later.

Please advise me. MOM

DEAR MOM: Bring them home. Their grades are sufficient evidence to justify it. These are important years. They desperately need a firm hand, guidance and discipline. They'll thank you later. And if they don't, at least you'll know that you did all you could for them.

DEAR ABBY: I could not leave unanswered your reply to "Nameless," whose wife made several suicide attempts.

My mother died a natural death two years ago. My father died last month at 73 of carbon-monoxide poisoning.

I am proud to say that he finished the last page of his long "note" on the night before he died, after dictating it to his best friend. On Sunday morning, my two daughters and I arrived at his home for a lunch date to find the sheriff and coroner there.

My family will bear its share of guilt for not preventing his death — each in his and her own way. But I say, "Greater love hath no man."

He did not want to live on as a vegetable; he left a six-page letter of explanation in lovely, lucid English.

I miss both my parents. But I honor their memory in the only way I know; I share their love with all other living things. That is their legacy to me. And if I am lucky, my three children will share this love with the family of man.

You may use my name.

County Hunger Picture Unclear

By H. L. HOFFMASTER
Star Staff Writer

The hunger situation in Lancaster County is not dramatic. Nobody is starving to death. Pitifully thin children are not begging crumbs on the street.

But there is malnutrition in and around Lincoln and it is serious, health officials and the victims of hunger say.

Indication that all is not healthy nutritionally comes clandestinely in hard to interpret statistics and not so hard to interpret incidents.

No Solid Data

Nowhere in the county is there solid data that explicitly states how many people aren't getting enough to eat.

But in 1969, Newsweek magazine listed Nebraska as a state with the "likelihood of serious malnutrition among one-fifth of the population."

And there are nonstatistical indicators of a problem.

Last year, at Elliott Elementary School, a boy was caught stealing another student's sandwich.

He was called into the principal's office and told that he wasn't to steal another person's lunch.

3 Days Without Food

"But I haven't eaten in three days," the boy replied. The school then saw to it that he got all the sandwiches he could eat.

Poverty, ignorance and negligence are the trio which have brought free lunch and breakfast programs to Lincoln schools like Elliott and Clinton, the only two schools in the Capital City with before-school meals to fight undernutrition.

But now it's summertime and school's out . . . what is the boy who had to steal his lunch eating now?

That's the information that is hard to come by, a fact that disturbs Dr. E. D. Lyman, who heads the County-City Health Department.

Studies Incomplete

He says there is mal- and undernutrition in the county, but because studies have been few and narrowly focused, he doesn't have total numbers of people with marginal to severe diet problems.

A recent survey of city-county employees, however — people who are working and who have money for groceries — shows that even among the middle class there are indicators of poor nutrition.

Of the 1,069 who volunteered to be checked, 17 per cent were either actual or borderline hypertension cases and hypertension often (but not always) results from improper diet.

Seven per cent of those surveyed showed blood sugar excess and that implies a diet problem.

1 of 20 Anemic

A little over five per cent were anemic or showed signs of anemia and that is an indicator of possible malnutrition.

Leslie Rutherford, now director of the Open Door Health Center and formerly with the Lincoln Action Program emergency food program, says that the free and/or low cost breakfast/lunch programs help maintain an adequate diet level during the school months, but during the summer some of the children are going back to just a few decent meals per week . . . or worse.

She says that while she worked with the emergency food program, there was "an unbelievable number of requests" from people who were out of food.

A LAP summer nutrition program which serves lunch to children of poor families is helping ease that, however.

Such programs, and food stamps, have corrected many potentially dangerous diet situations among Lincoln and Lancaster County residents.

Fewer Problems

The Open Door Health Center's annual pre-school physical exams, Rutherford says, indicate a decrease in the number of anemic children and also fewer dental problems which stem from improper diet. Only one case of severe vitamin deficiency was found last fall during the checkups.

But the potential for severe hunger remains.

Approximately 2,000 families in the county are at or under poverty income level and presumably would have trouble buying enough of, or the proper, groceries.

About 1,200 of those households, involving 3,400 people, were on food stamps as of June 1975, a county welfare assistant administrator says. The food stamp program allows people to buy groceries at a reduced price.

Minimal To Inadequate

Without food welfare, two per cent of the county's population would move from a minimal diet level to an inadequate level. Even though the percentage figure is small, it means thousands of humans not getting enough to eat right in the middle of the nation's breadbasket.

Even though Lancaster County doesn't have people starving to death, undernutrition is at work.

Children who don't have quite enough to eat suffer minor physical problems. They may not be learning as well as they could or should, although Dr. Hazel Fox of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says "we have no hard statistical information on that."

Dr. Fox, chairman of the food and nutrition department, said she does believe, however, that hungry children do not concentrate as well and probably do not learn as well as other children.

She also points out that malnutrition cuts across class lines because malnutrition means "the wrong kind of nutrition" and that can result in obesity as well as being underweight.

Undernutrition, not enough of the right kinds of foods, can also cut across class lines although generally it is the poorer people who don't have enough to eat.

Too Much Convenience

Affluent families may rely too much on convenience meals which don't have the nutrition value of fresh foods, says Mrs. Lela Watts, Lincoln-Lancaster County health educator.

Mrs. Watts had another indicator of dietary problems in the county: 65 per cent of the counseling time of public health nurses is spent on teaching people proper diet.

Of the 175,000 people listed by the health department for Lancaster County, 70,000 are overweight, Mrs. Watts says. Also, 17,000 have hypertension. Both statistics indicate some sort of malnutrition problem, she says.

Besides the problems of undernutrition and malnutrition there is the problem of "psychological deprivation," Dr. Fox says. While some of the people may actually be underfed, many are hungry in the sense of not having what they want to eat . . . having to settle for ground chuck instead of sirloin steak.

That's like when a robust teenager charges the refrigerator saying he's "starving to death but there's nothing good to eat."

Such a subtle irony would be lost on Lancaster County's truly hungry people.

Food Stamp Diet Nutritious, But There's No Slack At All

Sharron Crosby and her three children are on food stamps and have no major complaints, except . . .

—"The kids get tired of the diet."
—"We get a lot of colds in the wintertime."
—"We don't eat meat every day."
—"The children don't get enough milk."

The mother's complaints would be typical of any family which has to struggle with today's food budget crunch.

Ms. Crosby is a VISTA worker with Lincoln's Open Door Health Center. She has three children: a boy, 12, and two girls, 8 and 5.

The first two weeks of the month are pretty good, she says; it's the last half of the month in which the larder gets slim. That's when sometimes oatmeal is the main dish at the dinner table.

To feed the family of four, she buys $162 per month worth of food with stamps that cost her $28.

That $162 is a bit over $40 per person per month and that amount rides about in the middle range of an informal survey of people who aren't on food stamps.

Seven Star newsroom staffers averaged out their monthly food costs and the range was from $30 to $250 per person per month. Three newsroom families spent about $10 less per person per month than the Crosby allotment, two were about at the same level, while two were considerably above.

The Crosby family has chicken once a week and "lots of tuna dishes," she says. Also, as much fruit as she can buy, and they use fruit as a substitute for desserts. She relies on bread bought from the day-old bakery which is much cheaper than fresh bread on the grocery shelf. Oatmeal replaces and dry, prepared breakfast food and there's "absolutely" no sugared cereals.

The need to economize in eating has at least one good side effect in the household. She is teaching the children how to cook, how to buy, and — being conscious of nutrition needs — how to plan a good diet.

She is certain that her children's schoolwork occasionally suffers because of diet inadequacies. Sometimes her children don't eat breakfast even though there's food in the house and when they go to school without that, she's "embarrassed" because of the implication she's not a good mother.

One other indication she has that the food situation is a bit tight is that her 12-year-old son went to visit her mother in Fremont and gained 25 pounds. After returning home, he gradually lost all of that on a food stamp diet.

Amputee Couple Learning To Cope

Tracy, Minn. (AP) — Getting around on their own, in a home of their own, is the goal of Bob and Lavonna Radke, a young couple rebuilding their lives from wheelchairs.

Bob, 23, is re-learning the car repair business from his father. Lavonne, 26, can do some housework again.

Their old life ended last Jan. 10, when they were stranded in their car for 36 hours during a vicious storm the National Weather Service called the "blizzard of the century."

Their legs were so badly frozen they had to be amputated above the knees.

"Sometimes," said Bob, "we can't remember what is fact or fancy of that time in the blizzard."

They spent three months in St. Paul-Ramsey Hospital before moving in with Bob's parents, Harold and Kay Radke, in the little town of Tracy.

"Harold and I also decided that the kids needed to start doing things to help themselves," said Kay Radke. "That's part of their therapy." So while Kay was persuading Lavonna that she could wash dishes and run a vacuum cleaner, Bob was outside learning to run a mini-tractor.

Both are expecting to be fitted soon with artificial legs. "Like Humpty Dumpty, I have to try and stand on my stumps and balance, so I won't fall either way," said Lavonna. "That's the first step toward getting fit with artificial legs."

Bob and Lavonna also must rebuild their marriage, which was only six months old when their accident happened.

"Maybe that will be the real story," said Bob, "how we are able to live day by day without someone to push or carry or help us."

"In our own place again," added Lavonna.

Corn Crop Is Suffering, But Not Like Last Year

By The Associated Press
Dry, windy weather with temperatures in the 90s took its toll on Nebraska's corn crop last week, according to the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

The official decline in the corn crop was from 86 on a 100-point scale to 81. But Doug Murfield, director of the division, said that dryland corn was "nowhere near" 81.

Murfield said that although rains have come to Nebraska in the last three days, they have been spotty and much of the dryland corn was still under stress.

Murfield said the general situation is not nearly as bad as a year ago, but some areas may be worse.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said the service was concerned about the corn crop, but did not feel the state was on the verge of a disaster declaration.

Topsoil moistures were short in 89% of the counties and subsoil moistures were 82% short.

A year ago, topsoil moisture supplies were 96% short and subsoil moisture 91% short.

Only 10% of the corn crop rated excellent. Another 65% was rated good, but 21% was rated fair and 4% poor.

Almost 40% of the corn was silked compared to an average of 30% for this point in the season.

Winter wheat was 70% harvested compared with 95% a year ago.

Sorghum conditions declined from 86 on a 100-point scale to 80. That compares with 67% a year ago.

Alfalfa conditions continued to decline with 34% of the crop fair and 55% good. Another 6% was poor and 6% was excellent.

Wild hay conditions also declined.

Sugarbeets and dry beans were reported in generally good condition.

Pasture and range conditions declined from 33% short a week ago to 50% this week.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week included:

Burlington 46 Omaha 33
Chadron 25 Norfolk 19
Grand Island 12.07 Scottsbluff 38
Lincoln 73 Valentine 10

Precipitation received via sections since the beginning of the growing season, April 1, as compared to longtime averages follows:

6 More Die On Highways

From Press Reports
Six persons died in Nebraska traffic accidents Monday, raising the state's 1975 fatality toll to 184 as compared with 207 by July 21 last year.

The State Patrol said Donald E. Bell, 42, of North Platte was killed in a one-car accident on U.S. 30 about 2½ miles west of North Platte.

Officers said Bell's eastbound car apparently went out of control, crossed the highway, flew across a ditch, hit some trees and flipped, landing on its top in the front yard of a house.

Troopers said Bell was thrown from the car, which landed on top of him.

In another accident an empty gas transport truck went out of control on Highway 9 Monday, rolled over and collided with a flatbed semi-trailer truck carrying a load of steel, killing the driver of the transport.

Killed was Robert T. Hankin, 36, Fremont, who was driving the transport for Central Transport Co., Norfolk. Authorities said Hankin's truck went off the shoulder of the highway and rolled back across the highway into the path of the second truck driven by David Behmer, 20, Hoskins.

Behmer was driving a truck for Midwest Bridge, Norfolk.

In Omaha police said Mrs. Marietta Sutera, 76, of Omaha was killed when she was struck by a car as she ran to catch a bus.

Investigators said the accident occurred at the intersection of 37th Ave. and Leavenworth St.

Witness said Mrs. Sutera was running across the intersection when she was struck by a car driven by Richard Schoettger Jr. of Omaha.

Earlier in the day, a car-pickup truck collision on Highway 281 about seven miles north of Grand Island claimed two lives.

The dead were identified as Arthur H. Walters, 23, of Alda, and Brenda Chaffin, 4, of Burwell.

Authorities said Walters' car ran off the road, then came back across the highway and slammed head-on into a pickup truck driven by Leland Chaffin Jr., 25, the girl's father.

Chaffin suffered minor injuries. Walters was alone at the time of the mishap.

An Omaha woman, Susan Potter, 25, died early Monday in a car-semi crash on Highway 92 west of Omaha.

Officers said the Potter auto apparently crossed the centerline and collided with the big truck.

The truck driver, identified as Robert Perkins of Mead, escaped with minor injuries.

Dr. Miles Tommeraaen, vice chancellor for business and finance at NU, said the postal service will begin delivering mail to only one location on each campus rather than delivering mail to each office.

Tommeraaen said distributing the mail will cost the NU system about $30,000 annually which has not been included in the current budget.

Nuclear Plant Opponents Are Refused 60-Day Delay

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Opponents of a second nuclear power plant Ft. Calhoun Monday were given until Wednesday to prepare their arguments against the plant.

A hearing officer for the State Power Review Board refused to grant a group of citizens calling themselves the Nebraska Public Power Project an extra 60 days to prepare their case.

Dennis Keefe, an attorney for the protestors, told the hearing officer that none of them were aware that Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) has filed its application to construct the 1,150-megawatt Ft. Calhoun plant #2 until July 9.

Since construction is not slated to begin on the $810 million plant until 1976, Keefe questioned how the delay could hurt.

But, Del Dirrim, an OPPD attorney, strongly disputed Keefe's claim that the group had been caught off guard by the filing.

Since construction is not slated to begin on the $810 plant until 1976, Keefe questioned how the delay could hurt.

But, Del Dirrim, an OPPD attorney, strongly disputed Keefe's claim that the group had been caught off guard by the filing.

Noting that the group began planning its strategy to fight Ft. Calhoun #2 back in March, Dirrim produced a memo to group members written by Rich Lombardi of Lincoln, an aide to Sen. Steve Fowler, in which Lombardi said the group's primary purpose is to "impede construction" of the plant.

Delays, such as the 60-day request, are part of the group's strategy to buy time, Dirrim said.

The protests amount to "irresponsible obstructionism" using "frivolous and dilatory" tactics which will cost Nebraska electric ratepayers $13 million, he said.

Dirrim said the delay would not be harmless but would throw the entire schedule off by 60 days.

"This could only cause a 60-day delay in placing this unit into commercial production," he said, at a cost of $13 million in additional interest charges.

Study Said Wrong
Keefe contended that the Ft. Calhoun #2 plant was based on a power study which was drawn from faulty or incomplete data regarding the cost of nuclear fuel, the disposal of spent fuel and future power needs.

Dirrim acknowledged the study was probably out-of-date in some respects, but he said it is not a legal document nor is it a feasibility study.

"This study has about as much legal significance as a Sears and Roebuck catalogue," he said.

Keefe, however, contended the nuclear plant is not only unnecessary from a power supply standpoint but will become an economic "monstrosity" for ratepayers.

Keefe noted that the Power Review Board in its annual report estimated that state would experience a 1,650-megawatt power surplus in 1983 — the year the second Ft. Calhoun plant is scheduled to begin generation. If the plant is scrapped, he reasoned, a power shortage would not occur.

They will be at Northeast Technical Community College, Norfolk, Aug. 4; Central Technical Community College, Hastings, Aug. 6; and Mid-Plains Technical Community College, North Platte, Aug. 8.

Carnes Takes Central City Post
Central City — Gerald G. Carnes, 39, has been selected as superintendent of the Central City schools. Head of the schools at Ashland for the past eight years, Carnes will succeed Marvin Shreve, who resigned to accept a similar post with the Seward schools. Carnes is a native of Auburn and received his B.A. degree from Peru State College. Before going to Ashland, he headed schools at DeWitt and Waco.

Dorchester Student Receives Grant
Brenda Hansen of Dorchester has been named recipient of the Production Credit (Lincoln) scholarship valued at $350. The support will go toward her 1975-76 school year at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne M. Hansen of Dorchester, she will be a freshman at NU this fall, majoring in home economics.

Mishap Blamed On 'Sun Kink'
Beaver City — Derailment of six loaded grain hoppers of a 98-car Burlington Northern freight west of here was tentatively blamed on a "sun kink." A spokesman for the railroad said a sun kink, or kinking of the rail caused by extremely high temperatures is believed to have caused the derailment. About 10 to 11 lengths of rail were torn up in the derailment, investigators reported.

Water Releases Causing Woes For Landowners

Niobrara (UPI) — The heavy rains that recently inundated the northern tier of Midwest states and the snow melts of late winter are posing a problem for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers as they wrestle with the logistics of where to put the water.
The corps has decided to increase the water release rate on the string of hydro-electric dams along the Missouri River, in some cases to 60,000 cubic feet per second. As a result, property along the river's edge is going under. With the corps receiving the go-ahead to increase the record release rate, the threat of serious damage increases.

Land owners in the Gavins Point area in eastern South Dakota and northeast Nebraska failed recently in their attempt to obtain an injunction against further damage because of the increased releases. As a result, the landowners turned to a more practical but temporary solution — sandbagging.

The center of the problem from a residential standpoint is at the Lazy Acres housing area two miles upstream from Niobrara, where 10 to 12 homes face the threat of being flooded when the river is expected to overflow its banks at that location Wednesday.
Agricultural areas are already being affected. One farmer, Felix Motacek, has much of his corn crop under water. Motacek said Tuesday that an island of corn remained above water but that it would also be under water by mid-week.
There will be another court hearing in U.S. District Court in Sioux Falls, S.D. Friday on the request for a temporary injunction, but even if the court rules favorably for the landowners, it will be too late to stop the corps from increasing releases.
Corps officials say the high rate of discharge will continue into November.

Polynesian Tomato Plants Turn Out To Be Marijuana

Omaha (AP) — Those weren't Polynesian tomato plants someone stole from Mr. and Mrs. Jake Webb's garden in Omaha.
A neighbor told Webb they were marijuana, and police agreed.
Webb wonders how the three seed packets he bought from an eastern company after reading a magazine advertisement turned out to be marijuana. He paid $2.35 for the seeds.
Webb said the ad related the seeds would produce plants bearing 40 pounds of tomatoes each.

He planted the seeds in egg cartons and nursed them until the spring, then the Webbs moved the seedlings to their garden.
"I was wondering why they didn't bloom," Webb said. "But I figured the first year we might not get anything. They grew to five feet."
Then the three largest plants vanished last week. Webb threw the remaining plants into the garbage and said he plans to talk to his lawyer about a possible suit against the company that sold the seeds.

50 Nebraska And Iowa Towns Face Construction Fund Shutoff

Kansas City (AP) — More than 50 communities in Iowa and Nebraska are under sanctions that will prohibit direct federal assistance for building projects in their flood-prone areas, officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development said Monday.
Gary McClure, regional flood insurance specialist for HUD in Kansas City, said a one-year grace period for 36 Iowa towns and 18 Nebraska communities has expired without their making application for a flood insurance program.
The numbers change daily as new communities participate in the program and as grace periods expire. McClure said here were nearly 300 towns in the two states — 153 in Iowa and 146 in Nebraska — participating as of Monday.

Some 200 more communities — 117 in Iowa and 109 in Nebraska — have been identified as being in or partly in flood-prone areas but are not yet in the flood insurance program.
They face the loss of federal funding for building construction in their flood hazardous areas if they don't enter the program before their one-year grace period expires, McClure said.
More communities will be added to the list as they are identified as being in a flood plain area, he said.
The communities then must make application to participate in the flood insurance program and adopt resolutions regulating land uses in their areas designated as flood prone.

Omaha Woman Killed, Apparently In Robbery

Omaha (AP) — An elderly Omaha woman was slain over the weekend.
Police said the body of Maria Gibilisco 76, was found Sunday night in the bedroom of her near Southside residence.
The preliminary results of an autopsy showed the woman had been stabbed three times in the neck and chest.

Detectives said the woman was apparently stabbed by an intruder who gained entry to the home by cutting through a screen door.
A check of the residence revealed that about $190 was missing.
Late Monday, police said they had no suspects in connection with the slaying.

Nuclear Plant Opponents Are Refused 60-Day Delay

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer
Opponents of a second nuclear power plant Ft. Calhoun Monday were given until Wednesday to prepare their arguments against the plant.
A hearing officer for the State Power Review Board refused to grant a group of citizens calling themselves the Nebraska Public Power Project an extra 60 days to prepare their case.
Dennis Keefe, an attorney for the protestors, told the hearing officer that none of them were aware that Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) has filed its application to construct the 1,150-megawatt Fr. Calhoun plant #2 until July 9.
Since construction is not slated to begin on the $810 million plant until 1976, Keefe questioned how the delay could hurt.
Disputes Claim
But, Del Dirrim, an OPPD attorney, strongly disputed Keefe's claim that the group had been caught off guard by the filing.

Noting that the group began planning its strategy to fight Ft. Calhoun #2 until July 9.

The protests amount to "irresponsible obstructionism" using "frivolous and diatry" tactics which will cost Nebraska electric ratepayers $13 million, he said.
Dirrim said the delay would not be harmless but would throw the entire schedule off by 60 days.
"This could only cause a 60-day delay in placing this unit into commercial production," he said, at a cost of $13 million in additional interest charges.
Study Said Wrong
Keefe contended that the Ft. Calhoun #2 plant was based on a power study which was drawn from faulty or incomplete data regarding the cost of nuclear fuel, the disposal of spent fuel and future power needs.
Dirrim acknowledged the study was probably out-of-date in some respects, but he said it is not a legal document nor is it a feasibility study.
"This study has about as much legal significance as a Sears and Roebuck catalogue," he said.
Keefe, however, contended the nuclear plant is not only unnecessary from a power supply standpoint but will become an economic "monstrosity" for ratepayers.
Keefe noted that the Power Review Board in its annual report estimated that state would experience a 1,650-megawatt power surplus in 1983 — the year the second Ft. Calhoun plant is scheduled to begin generation. If the plant is scrapped, he reasoned, a power shortage would not occur.

Norman Rollins

Liquor Board Reaffirms Rollins Firing

The Nebraska Liquor Control Commission Monday unanimously reaffirmed its July 11 decision to fire its chief enforcement officer, Norman Rollins, for incompetence and insubordination.
On the motion of Commissioner Lowell Shaeffer of Willow Island, the commission dismissed Rollins as of Aug. 4 following a day-long hearing.
Rollins, 42, countered that his dismissal was inspired by Commissioner Ed Robinson of Omaha.
Robinson, he contended in written testimony given the commission, had improperly used state personnel and state equipment for his personal use.
Among the grounds for dismissal were charges that Rollins refused to comply with an order, failed to report an accident involving a commission vehicle, took an unauthorized leave and attempted to use his influence improperly.

RESPA Is Slowing Down Home-Buying Procedure

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — In some parts of the country, it's taking a little longer than usual to get a mortgage. What's holding up the show is the new Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA), which requires that all the costs associated with buying and selling a piece of property be disclosed in advance.

There are 56 different types of settlement charges shown on the disclosure form, ranging from tax adjustments to title search to transfer fees. Typically, these can add $2,000 or more to the cost of a house.

As with any new law, there's a breaking-in period — and that's what is happening now. The forms are confusing to someone not practiced in handling them. Many banks are taking two or three weeks longer than usual to process mortgage applications, and special situations may drag on for an extra month. "The day of the quick closing is over," says Louis Capalini, president of the Union Savings Bank of New York.

It's the job of the banks and savings and loans to prepare the disclosure forms, but they're shoving the actual work back to the real estate brokers and lawyers. Different banks have different procedures for gathering the information, and brokers are up to their elbows in unaccustomed paperwork.

"Some banks make it easy," one broker told me, "but others have forms you practically need a lawyer to read."

The disclosure form that is finally given to the customer, however, is mandated by RESPA; you should find it clear and easy to understand.

Banks, for their part, are reacting to the law according to their temperament. Some say RESPA is "no problem," others moan that the paperwork is so bad they're going to have to raise fees. It's against the law to charge for the time required to complete the RESPA form. But if, after a few months, a bank's loan origination fee should go up $50, there's probably nothing the law can do.

Useful as the new form is for laying out costs, it doesn't help the consumer in one vital area: namely, shopping around for the best deal at closing. In any given area, one bank or S&L may be as much as $400 or $500 more expensive than another (the difference often lying in what you have to pay the bank's attorney).

But you usually don't find this out until you've applied for your mortgage (and paid the bank a nonrefundable $50 or $75). At that point, you're pretty well committed to go ahead with that particular lender—and if you changed your mind, it would cost you another $50 or $75 to apply somewhere else.

The best way to find out which lender is the cheapest is to ask a lawyer who handles mortgage closings in your area. I think that real estate brokers should also keep a list of the closing costs of the banks they deal with, for you to examine before applying for a mortgage. At times like these, when mortgage money is plentiful, there's absolutely no excuse for a broker to steer you to a lender who's $400 more expensive than the competition.

One way RESPA has saved some homebuyers money is on title insurance. The new law prohibits the insurance company from kicking back some portion of your insurance premium to the lawyer or broker who brought in the business. As a result, the price of title insurance in some areas has fallen.

There's another way to save on title insurance, and that's by foregoing it (if your circumstances warrant it). Banks in most cities require title insurance to cover the mortgage, and some states insist that you buy another policy covering your own interest in the property.

But where the owner's policy is optional, some lawyers encourage you to skip it. The usual problems that come up are covered under the bank's policy; yours takes over only for amounts larger than the mortgage, or in special cases that hurt the owner but not the lender. These rarely arise.

Many parts of the country get by nicely without any title insurance at all. A lawyer does the title search, and the number of challenges is very small.

Lawyers say you'd be wise to buy an owner's policy for property in a new subdivision, where the title hasn't passed the test of time. But if the house you've bought has been occupied for some time, and the title search is done by a competent professional, the chance of something going wrong may be so small as to be hardly worth insuring.

TWA: Special Rates Blocked

Washington (UPI) — Charles C. Tillinghast, Jr., chairman of the board of Trans World Airlines said the Civil Aeronautics Board is blocking attempts by his company to offer special discount fares to families and young people.

In an interview with U.S. News & World Report, Tillinghast said TWA has filed a new family-fare plan which would make it easier for a household to travel from the East Coast to the West Coast. But, he said, the CAB has "turned it down because it's discriminatory against people who don't have wives and children."

Xerox tumbled 2% to 65 in fifth place on the active list.

Markets At A Glance

Stock Mart Experiences Fourth Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market felt the weight of rising interest rates again Monday, recording its fourth straight loss in quiet trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slid 7.67 to 854.74, extending its loss since last Tuesday's close to 27.07 points.

Declines outpaced advances 918 to 515 among the issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to 16.69 million shares, down from 16.87 million on Friday and the lightest total in two weeks.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .39 to 49.68, and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was down .76 at 92.44.

The Dow rose about 2 points at the outset in a brief flurry of buying on a Beirut newspaper's report that Israel and Egypt had agreed on a three-year truce plan.

A source in Cairo later in the day described the report as "too optimistic," although there were said to be signs of progress toward a disengagement pact.

By that time, however, the market's attention seemed to have been diverted back to the interest rate worries that plagued it last week.

At mid-morning, the First National Bank of Chicago raised its prime lending rate from 7 1/4 to 7 7/8 per cent, matching an increase posted last Friday by New York's First National City Bank.

A smattering of other banks during the day raised their rates from 7 to 7 1/4 per cent. Federal reserve operations in the short term money markets, meanwhile, were taken by analysts as a sign that the central bank was tightening its credit policy a bit further.

An added depressant cited by brokers was the cold reception given the bonds of New York's Municipal Assistance Corp. after they were freed from fixed price terms.

It appeared the sharp price drops incurred by the bonds severely diminished the agency's potential ability to sell $2 billion more in bonds between now and September to combat New York City's financial crisis.

Pan American World Airways, the day's most active issue and also its sharpest percentage loser, fell 3 1/4 to 34. An official of the Iranian national airline said over the weekend his country had decided against a proposal for it to come to Pan Am's financial aid.

Xerox tumbled 2% to 65 in fifth place on the active list.

Rewriting Of Law Would Sharply Curtail News Coverage

By JACK C. LANDAU
(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — While Richard Nixon is gone, he has left a last legal legacy in the form of a bill before Congress to restrict the press he resented so much.
Sponsored by a powerful coalition of senators from both parties, the bill, if passed, would authorize the easy conviction of reporters and editors for publishing unauthorized stories about such things as:
—The Pentagon Papers, the SALT disarmament talks or Middle East diplomatic negotiations.

—CIA domestic spying.
—FBI efforts to infiltrate and harass the anti-war movement.
—The Nixon administration's "plumber units" and plans to set up a White House secret police system.
—Unpublished government reports from dozens of agencies completely unrelated to defense or foreign affairs.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a four-part series examining legislation proposed in the Senate, S. 1. The bill is a controversial rewriting of the federal criminal laws.)

private threats to TV networks.
By early 1973, relations between Nixon and the press had stabilized to some degree. The Pentagon Papers and confidential source decisions were on the Supreme Court books. The Ellsberg case was involved in technical pre-trial maneuvers. The Watergate case was still called a "second rate burglary" although its potential was known to Nixon and his top aides.

and defense issues, and to jail government employees who give them this information.
—Establish for the first time the concept that the government owns government information and therefore can jail newsmen for publishing government reports without permission.
—Establish for the first time clear legislative authority to jail news reporters who refuse to disclose their confidential sources of unauthorized government information.

A section called "Disclosing Classified Information" states that it is a crime for present or former employees to communicate "classified information" to any "person who is not authorized to receive it."
This provision on "classified information" is much broader than the one on "national defense information" because virtually every scrap of paper involving any important issue of foreign affairs or defense is routinely stamped "classified."

the United States... by impairing, obstructing and defeating its lawful government function of controlling the dissemination of... government studies, reports memoranda and communications."
The government's Ellsberg trial brief said:
"Both the documents and their contents are the property of the United States and remain its property until they are... released by the government. The content of such... documents is itself government property quite apart from the government's ownership of the sheets on which it is recorded."

New Penalties
The bill also would impose new penalties on government employees who leak information to the press and on reporters who refuse to disclose their confidential government sources.
Nixon always distrusted most of the press, as he indicated so clearly in November 1962, when — having lost a race for the California governorship — he turned to the reporters and said bitterly: "You won't have Nixon to kick around any more."
Always suspicious of direct questioning by individual reporters, he generally ignored the press in his 1968 campaign and went directly to the voters on television with speeches, staged press conferences and paid advertisements.
Having ignored the press and won the presidency, Nixon took a second political gamble.
Media Under Attack
Starting in November 1969, Vice President Spiro Agnew and then Nixon started their widening attacks on both the print and electronic media, and the Nixon-Agnew popularity continued to climb.
With his political assaults on the press such a success, Nixon switched to legal assaults, both openly and secretly.

Starting in 1969, the administration subpoenaed news reporters to disclose their confidential news sources. In 1972, the administration won a Supreme Court case requiring a reporter for the first time to give his confidential sources to a federal grand jury.
Forbidden To Publish
In 1971, the administration obtained a temporary injunction against publication by the New York Times of the Pentagon Papers. For the first time in history, a newspaper of general circulation had been forbidden to publish news of national interest. Fourteen days later, the Supreme Court, by a vote of 6-3, voided the injunction.
The administration then indicated Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo for leaking the Pentagon Papers to the press.
Meanwhile, it was later discovered, the administration wiretapped reporters and present or former government employees to discover who was talking to the press. It also secretly encouraged other harassments like challenges to the licenses of the Washington Post TV stations in Florida and

Criminal Laws Asked
Nixon decided to move once again against the press. This time he asked Congress to adopt criminal laws to impose the kind of controls on the press which he found difficult to impose under then existing laws and court decisions.
The Nixon bill died in Congress during the Watergate and impeachment controversies but was reintroduced in basically its Nixonian form on Jan. 15 of this year as S. 1, the Criminal Justice Reform Act of 1975.
It is supported by such senators as the conservative John McClellan, D-Ark., the moderate Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and the liberal Birch Bayh, D-Ind.
The bill's provisions on the press would:
—Establish for the first time an Official Secrets Act which would give the president, the Defense Department and the State Department virtually unlimited powers to jail news reporters and editors for publishing a whole range of information about foreign affairs

Official secrets act: The key provision, which the press sees as a threat, is a section called "Disclosing National Defense Information."
It states that a news reporter is guilty of this offense if, "knowing that national defense information may be used to the prejudice of the safety or interest of the United States, or to the advantage of a foreign power, he communicates such information to a person who he knows is not authorized to receive it."
Sweeping Definition
In its definition of "national defense information," the bill sweeps within its criminal scope virtually all important foreign and defense news including "military capability of the United States or an associate nation's," "military planning operations of the United States," "intelligence operations, activities, plans, estimates, analyses sources or methods of the United States" and "intelligence with regard to a foreign power."
The only limitation on the certainty of conviction is the stipulation that the news reporter must know that the information "may be used" to the "prejudice" of the United States or to the "advantage of a foreign power."

Must Be Proven
Under present law, there is no clear way to prosecute a present or former government employee for disclosing classified information. The government must prove that the information is important — such as a code or blueprint or atomic secret — or that it was secretly leaked to an agent for a foreign power.
The bill, while concentrating on government leaks to the press, does not overlook the original legal dispute between the press and the government over confidential news sources, especially news leaks by civil servants.
It would subject a news reporter to criminal prosecution if he engages in "...concealing... (the) identity" of the government source who leaked him the classified information.
Unauthorized government information: Provisions against publication of "national defense" or "classified" information are relatively narrow compared with the "government ownership of information" approach adopted from the Nixon administration's 1973 bill.
Automatic Prosecution
Under this section, the press would be automatically subject to criminal prosecution for publishing any government report — on any subject at all — without formal government approval.
It is based on a novel concept that the government owns its information and therefore it can prosecute the press for using government information without authority, just as the government can prosecute a person for using a government jeep without authority.
This concept was first developed by the Nixon administration during the Pentagon Papers litigation when it argued that it owned the government report — a concept which both the press and courts rejected.
The indictment of Ellsberg and Russo accused them of the crime of attempting "to defraud

What Was Value?
But the government had a conceptual problem with the Ellsberg prosecution because federal law requires proof that the information — in this case the Pentagon Papers — is worth more than $100. Ellsberg maintained that government reports belong to the public and therefore have no monetary value.
In order to avoid this obstacle, the 1973 Nixon administration bill added a new definition of government property to clearly cover all government reports regardless of the monetary value. It defined government property as "intellectual property or information..."
When the press objected to this definition, a Senate subcommittee made a change in the proposed law. The change would authorize a theft prosecution against a news reporter if he "...uses... a record or other document owned by, or under the care, custody or control of the United States... regardless of its monetary value."
Like its 1973 predecessor, the 1975 version of the bill would subject a news reporter to prosecution if he "uses... a document" of the government without its permission.
The Senate heard most of the press's complaints about S. 1 two years ago when the Nixon administration bill was presented but the Nixon provisions are still there.
This means, of course, that should the press sanctions of the bill — or substantial portions of them — be enacted, Richard Nixon will have been instrumental in imposing more limitations on the news media after he left office than while he was in the White House.

"Now is the time to buy a furnace?"

That's right. And we know it's the last thing you want to think about now. But you should order that furnace now or you could get left out in the cold during the fall rush.

And make sure you replace your gas furnace with another gas furnace. Natural gas will heat two homes with the same amount of energy it takes to heat one home electrically. That's because it takes no other forms of energy to produce gas, and gas comes to your home without losing a lot of its "punch" on the way.

Save energy and money with a gas furnace. Call your heating dealer now. Strike while the iron is hot.

Would Reverse Decision
The bill would reverse the Pentagon Papers decision because the government, in order to obtain a successful prosecution, would not have to prove — as under present law — that the published information posed any "clear and present danger" to the "national security."
Existing law also requires the government to prove that the reporter or editor has a specific "intent" to harm the United States, rather than the vaguer category in S. 1 of information which "may be used" to the prejudice of the United States — a use by foreign government over which a newspaper has no control.
Government news leaks: The bill gives specific attention to government employees who, like Ellsberg, leak information to the press.

Rewriting Of Law Would Sharply Curtail News Coverage

By JACK C. LANDAU
(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — While Richard Nixon is gone, he has left a last legal legacy in the form of a bill before Congress to restrict the press he resented so much.
Sponsored by a powerful coalition of senators from both parties, the bill, if passed, would authorize the easy conviction of reporters and editors for publishing unauthorized stories about such things as:

—The Pentagon Papers, the SALT disarmament talks or Middle East diplomatic negotiations.
—CIA domestic spying.
—FBI efforts to infiltrate and harass the anti-war movement.
—The Nixon administration's "plumber units" and plans to set up a White House secret police system.
—Unpublished government reports from dozens of agencies completely unrelated to defense or foreign affairs.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a four-part series examining legislation proposed in the Senate, S. 1. The bill is a controversial rewriting of the federal criminal laws.)

Starting in 1969, the administration subpoenaed news reporters to disclose their confidential news sources. In 1972, the administration won a Supreme Court case requiring a reporter for the first time to give his confidential sources to a federal grand jury.

Forbidden To Publish
In 1971, the administration obtained a temporary injunction against publication by the New York Times of the Pentagon Papers. For the first time in history, a newspaper of general circulation had been forbidden to publish news of national interest. Fourteen days later, the Supreme Court, by a vote of 6-3, voided the injunction.

The administration then indicated Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo for leaking the Pentagon Papers to the press. Meanwhile, it was later discovered, the administration wiretapped reporters and present or former government employees to discover who was talking to the press. It also secretly encouraged other harassments like challenges to the licenses of the Washington Post TV stations in Florida and private threats to TV networks. By early 1973, relations between Nixon and the press had stabilized to some degree. The Pentagon Papers and confidential source decisions were on the Supreme Court books. The Ellsberg case was involved in technical pre-trial maneuvers. The Watergate case was still called a "second rate burglary" although its potential was known to Nixon and his top aides.

Criminal Laws Asked

Nixon decided to move once again against the press. This time he asked Congress to adopt criminal laws to impose the kind of controls on the press which he found difficult to impose under then existing laws and court decisions.

The Nixon bill died in Congress during the Watergate and impeachment controversies but was reintroduced in basically its Nixonian form on Jan. 15 of this year as S. 1, the Criminal Justice Reform Act of 1975.

It is supported by such senators as the conservative John McClellan, D-Ark., the moderate Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and the liberal Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

The bill's provisions on the press would:

—Establish for the first time an Official Secrets Act which would give the president, the Defense Department and the State Department virtually unlimited powers to jail news reporters and editors for publishing a whole range of information about foreign affairs and defense issues, and to jail government employees who give them this information.

—Establish for the first time the concept that the government owns government information and therefore can jail newsmen for publishing government reports without permission.

—Establish for the first time clear legislative authority to jail news reporters who refuse to disclose their confidential sources of unauthorized government information.

Official secrets act: The key provision, which the press sees as a threat, is a section called "Disclosing National Defense Information."

It states that a news reporter is guilty of this offense if, "knowing that national defense information may be used to the prejudice of the safety or interest of the United States, or to the advantage of a foreign power, he communicates such information to a person who he knows is not authorized to receive it."

Sweeping Definition

In its definition of "national defense information," the bill sweeps within its criminal scope virtually all important foreign and defense news including "military capability of the United States or an associate nation," "military planning operations of the United States," "intelligence operations, activities, plans, estimates, analyses sources or methods of the United States" and "intelligence with regard to a foreign power."

The only limitation on the certainty of conviction is the stipulation that the news reporter must know that the information "may be used" to the "prejudice" of the United States or to the "advantage of a foreign power."

But this is, the press contends, no limitation at all because most previously unpublished information from the Defense Department or the State Department would be, in some way, used "to the advantage" of a foreign power or to the "prejudice" of the United States.

This would include historical information such as the Pentagon Papers and such contemporary information as cost overruns on military defense contracts, debates about new military hardware, disclosures about illegal CIA operations in the United States or CIA operations abroad — such as the coup in Chile — and information about secret diplomatic negotiations in the Middle East or with the Soviet Union.

Would Reverse Decision

The bill would reverse the Pentagon Papers decision because the government, in order to obtain a successful prosecution, would not have to prove — as under present law — that the published information posed any "clear and present danger" to the "national security."

Existing law also requires the government to prove that the reporter or editor has a specific "intent" to harm the United States, rather than the vaguer category in S. 1 of information which "may be used" to the prejudice of the United States — a use by foreign government over which a newspaper has no control.

Government news leaks: The bill gives specific attention to government employees who, like Ellsberg, leak information to the press.

A section called "Disclosing Classified Information" states that it is a crime for present or former employees to communicate "classified information" to any "person who is not authorized to receive it."

This provision on "classified information" is much broader than the one on "national defense information" because virtually every scrap of paper involving any important issue of foreign affairs or defense is routinely stamped "classified."

Must Be Proven

Under present law, there is no clear way to prosecute a present or former government employee for disclosing classified information. The government must prove that the information is important — such as a code or blueprint or atomic secret — or that it was secretly leaked to an agent for a foreign power.

The bill, while concentrating on government leaks to the press, does not overlook the original legal dispute between the press and the government over confidential news sources, especially news leaks by civil servants.

It would subject a news reporter to criminal prosecution if he engages in "...concealing... (the) identity" of the government source who leaked him the classified information.

Unauthorized government information: Provisions against publication of "national defense" or "classified" information are relatively narrow compared with the "government ownership of information" approach adopted from the Nixon administration's 1973 bill.

Automatic Prosecution

Under this section, the press would be automatically subject to criminal prosecution for publishing any government report — on any subject at all — without formal government approval.

It is based on a novel concept that the government owns its information and therefore it can prosecute the press for using government information without authority, just as the government can prosecute a person for using a government jeep without authority.

This concept was first developed by the Nixon administration during the Pentagon Papers litigation when it argued that it owned the government report — a concept which both the press and courts rejected.

The indictment of Ellsberg and Russo accused them of the crime of attempting "to defraud

the United States... by impairing, obstructing and defeating its lawful government function of controlling the dissemination of... government studies, reports memoranda and communications."

The government's Ellsberg trial brief said:

"Both the documents and their contents are the property of the United States and remain its property until they are... released by the government. The content of such... documents is itself government property quite apart from the government's ownership of the sheets on which it is recorded."

What Was Value?

But the government had a conceptual problem with the Ellsberg prosecution because federal law requires proof that the information — in this case the Pentagon Papers — is worth more than $100. Ellsberg maintained that government reports belong to the public and therefore have no monetary value.

In order to avoid this obstacle, the 1973 Nixon administration bill added a new definition of government property to clearly cover all government reports regardless of the monetary value. It defined government property as "intellectual property or information..."

When the press objected to this definition, a Senate subcommittee made a change in the proposed law. The change would authorize a theft prosecution against a news reporter if he "...uses... a record or other document owned by, or under the care, custody or control of the United States... regardless of its monetary value."

Like its 1973 predecessor, the 1975 version of the bill would subject a news reporter to prosecution if he "uses... a document" of the government without its permission.

The Senate heard most of the press's complaints about S. 1 two years ago when the Nixon administration bill was presented but the Nixon provisions are still there.

This means, of course, that should the press sanctions of the bill — or substantial portions of them — be enacted, Richard Nixon will have been instrumental in imposing more limitations on the news media after he left office than while he was in the White House.

'Neighboring' Provides Senior With Rewarding Experience

By JOANNE FARRIS

A reader writes: "I agree with your suggestion that we old people should do what you call 'neighboring' for our own good and to help those around us. My 'neighboring' takes place at the nearby nursing home, where I visit two afternoons a week."

"About a year ago Marta S. came into the Home. She was thin and pale and had nothing to say. When I visited her all I got was a wan, shy little smile. She had terminal cancer and supposedly had only a short time to live. As the summer wore on and she did not die as I supposed she had expected, she began to perk up a bit.

"One day when I walked by she was sitting up in bed and gave me a tentative sort of wave of her hand. Next time I visited her she talked a little; now she talks all the time.

"She spends most of the days sitting in her room, but she has become the darling of the Home and in some ways is a sort of major-domo for the staff.

"She supervises the project of making bibs for the sloppy eaters. She makes bookmarks which I take to our church circle for sale at our Fair, and from what I can tell she is the mother-confessor for the young aides; she listens to their troubles and gives them advice."

"I just thought your readers might like to hear about one old lady (83 this year) who did not roll over and die when she was supposed to. She is well enough now to even get dressed and go out for a ride in a car when I get my boyfriend (I'm 70 and he's 76) to give up an afternoon of golf to take Marta for a ride."

QUESTION: "I read in your recent column in which you listed a number of locations where someone could get information on willing the body, or a part thereof, for medical science and research. However, you did not mention Indianapolis, and I herewith list this location for people who live here and wish to make this bequest. The address is: Indiana State Anatomical Board, 1100 W. Michigan St., Indiana University Medical Center, Room 258, Medical Science Bldg., Indianapolis, Inc. 46202.

"I do not wish my name mentioned so I shall not sign this letter. This is such a magnificent way to leave a good memory behind, and I wish I could influence others."

ANSWER: I am citing this letter in the hope that representatives of the State Anatomical Boards of other states will write in with their information, so that I can compile an index of places where people who wish to will their bodies or parts of them can get the information and the forms they need in order to make their bequests legal and binding.

A friend at the Deafness Research Foundation, 366 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017, has informed me that they seek donations from persons with hearing defects. Not surprisingly, considering where the working parts of our ears are, it is difficult to "study" ears of living persons.

Emphasis in such cases is on treatment. But it can be of great benefit to future generations if persons with defective hearing will donate their ears for research so that causes and cures for some defects may be found.

DeCamp Claims Huge Phone Bill Not All His Calls

State Sen. John DeCamp said the telephone company will issue him a new credit card because he discovered that an unauthorized person was charging long distance calls to his number.

DeCamp said he became aware that someone else was using his credit card number after it was called to his attention that his office was responsible for 22% of the legislative phone bill.

His phone bill was $2,500 for the fiscal year ending June 30.

DeCamp said that even if the unauthorized phone calls were subtracted, his phone bill would be higher than other senators because he does more work.

'Untapped Ag Wealth' Promoted

Washington (UPI) — Through research and development, Nebraska could lead the way in realizing riches from "completely untapped wealth" existing on farms, Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., said Monday.

One example cited by Thone was conversion of corn syrup so it is equivalent to sugar both in sweetness and calories. He noted industry has discovered an enzyme that will make the conversion and that production has risen from about 20,000 tons in 1971 to 500,000 tons this year.

Lack of production capacity has been the chief restraint on growth, the congressman said, adding he hopes the Nebraska Department of Economic Development will try to secure a corn syrup plant.

Another future source of wealth will come through learning how to use crop residue, such as wheat straw and corn stalks, as food or as an energy source, Thone said.

"If utilized, the fuel power of America's now wasted corn stalks, wheat straw and other plant residue would be enough to end all our imports of petroleum," he said. "A ton of plant residue delivers about two-thirds as much heat as a ton of average coal."

Mixing coal with plant residue offers another special advantage because an experiment has

Rangers Fire Martin, Lucchesi Named Replacement

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — A red-eyed, sleepless Billy Martin, known as baseball's street fighter, announced Monday that he had been fired as manager of the Texas Rangers, the third club to dispose of him because of his wrangling with management.

The announcement preceded by two hours a news conference at which majority owner Brad Corbett confirmed the decision. Also fired were pitching coach Art Fowler and assistant Charlie Silvera.

"I recognize this will cause a trauma with the fans... the fan reaction will be tough," Corbett said.

"As a student of the game, Billy was one of the finest," Corbett said, "but there are causes for his firing beyond his won-loss record. There was no particular one thing."

Martin, who said he hadn't slept in 48 hours, cleaned out his locker Monday night before the Rangers met the Boston Red Sox at Arlington Stadium.

"I've been fired, and my top assistant Frank Lucchesi is my replacement," Martin said.

Billy Martin

Corbett said Lucchesi, who managed Philadelphia in the National League for three years, would fill Martin's spot for the remainder of the 1975 campaign.

"What sometimes works for veteran players does not work for young players," Corbett said. "Sometimes a manager gets too much credit when he wins and too much criticism when he loses. Billy certainly made a contribution to this franchise."

Asked if he felt Martin had been disloyal to the ball club in his tirades against management decisions, Corbett said, "I would not care to comment on that. It would not be appropriate."

Martin said the last straw in the decision to fire him was a dispute with Corbett over the acquisition of newly released catcher Tom Egan.

"He (Corbett) wants to call the shots," said Martin. "... One year in baseball and all of a sudden he's a genius."

It was the third firing of Martin's managing career. He had been let go by the Detroit Tigers in September, 1973, and by the Minnesota Twins in October, 1969.

"People want a 'yes' man, somebody who says 'yes, sir.' Well, you can't win doing it that way," said Martin.

The Rangers weren't winning, anyway. At the time of Martin's departure, the club owned a listless 44-51 record, 15½ games behind the American League West Division-leading Oakland A's.

"It had become like a country club down here... a social club... I couldn't keep control of my players," said Martin.

Neither could he control Corbett, whom he says engineered the deal that sent outfielder Willie Davis to the St. Louis Cardinals. "The Willie Davis deal... was his. I bargained against it."

Martin spoke as he cleaned out his locker at Arlington Stadium. Then assistant Charles Silvera walked into former Rangers manager's office and said, "They got me, too."

Martin rose and shook hands with Silvera, saying, "I'm sorry I couldn't save you."

Then he continued. "Corbett accused me of one thing—lack of loyalty... One thing, I'm not got to stand up for his convictions.

"I'm happy about one thing. I brought Texas a winner... I brought Texas a million fans... and Texas finally got to see some baseball."

The year to which Martin referred was last season, when he guided the Rangers to an 84-76 record and second place in AL West, five games behind the A's. The club attracted an alltime high 1,193,902 fans to the stadium Martin left on Monday.

"I don't think I can come back into baseball, but of course I'm saying that right now without any sleep in two days," said Martin.

He said his immediate plans were to remain in the Arlington area with his wife Gretchen and their son.

"I have a home in Arlington, but the Rangers own it," he said, laughing. "I hope they don't take that away from me."

The 49-year-old Lucchesi managed the Philadelphia Phillies in 1970 and 1971 before being released on July 10, 1972. He guided the Cleveland Indians' American Association franchise, the Oklahoma City Oaks, to a third-place finish in 1973 before joining the Rangers as third-base coach in 1974.

Martin's firing Monday was similar to his releases from the Twins and Tigers.

In 1969, when Minnesota owner Calvin Griffith announced Martin's firing, he said, "Prior to hiring him, realizing his explosive personality... I had numerous meetings with him to set policy and guide lines. I feel

Top-Weighted Mount Air Seeks Kernal Win

By MARK GORDON Star Sports Writer

Mount Air has been away from the winner's circle for almost three months.

The pride of the OK Farms of Grand Island last had his picture taken on April 25 when he won the $15,350 Fonner Juvenile Stakes. That completed a fine Fonner meet when he won twice and finished second twice in four outings.

Although he failed to win at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha, Mount Air appears to be the horse to catch in Tuesday's $3,500 Kernal Stakes at the State Fairgrounds.

Ten 2-year-olds are set to compete in the 4-furlong race that has attracted two entries.

Top-weighted at 122 pounds under the allowance stakes conditions, Mount Air started three times in Omaha after his successful Grand Island start.

He faded to seventh in an allowance chase over five furlongs after leading much of the race on June 7. Then he finished fifth in the $20,000-added Laddie Stakes over 5½ furlongs on June 17.

However, he ran what might have been his best race ever when he placed second to Bold Lightning in the $33,400 Ak-Sar-Ben Futurity over 6 furlongs on June 27.

In that race, he defeated Flying Shouda (who breezed to an easy seven-length win in last Friday's Tassel Stakes here) and Get Up Chuck, who won the Laddie Stakes.

Overall, Mount Air has two wins and three seconds in seven outings this season for earnings of $20,287.

He will ridden by Lincoln's leading rider, Terry Barnes.

Perhaps the strongest challenges may come from Blue's Gray and Bar Host.

Blue's Gray, owned by Victor Glick, won an allowance race here last Tuesday over six furlongs and broke his maiden at Ak-Sar-Ben. He will be ridden by Tom Greer.

H. E. Clay and S. H. Struck's Bar Host, broke his maiden at Ak-Sar-Ben and then won a claiming race over 4½-furlongs on May 20. His stablemate, Swoon's World, is on the also-eligible list.

Other entrants, their weights and riders, if named include Vincent Brewer's Full Circuit (114 and Doug Schoepf); Ralph Armstrong's Mr. L.E.A. (114); Lowell Stevens' Pachuto (114); Olin Miles' Space Treasurer (114); Harold Bower's Lucky O.W. (114 and Rodolfo Calderon); Janet Smith et al's Bold And Built (114 and Louis Duthie); Mrs. H. Synhorst's Red's Mighty Barb (114 and Red Coffey). Also eligibles include F.W. Bemis' Kim's Lad (114 and Calderon) and a Dale Wolff entry of Quick Bart and Master Shad (each 112 and Barnes).

Meanwhile, newcomers are making inroads in the jockey and trainer standings after the first of five weeks of Lincoln racing.

Terry Barnes, who has not ridden for two years, made his riding comeback this week and proved that the layoff did not bother him.

He rode eight winners, five seconds and one third. Runnerup Wayne Anderson (whose second-best efforts have earned him the nickname "Avis") has eight wins, one second and one third.

Other newcomers from last year include Tom Greer (fifth), Walter Orona (sixth), Bill Stallings (seventh) and Kevin Lintner (ninth).

Fred Psota and newcomer Larry Frazee are tied for the trainer lead, each with 16 points.

Psota has saddled three winners and one third while Frazee, making his first Lincoln appearance, has two wins and two seconds.

Purses Rise

State Fairgrounds general manager Henry Brandt has boosted the minimum purse for the second time in three days.

Saturday, he hiked the minimum for Tuesday's races from $1,700 to $1,800 and Monday increased that $1,800 to $1,900 starting with Wednesday's races.

Brandt said he may boost the minimum for Thursday's races to $2,000. During the last week of the 1974 Lincoln meet, the minimum purse was $2,500.

Horse Sold

Omaha horse owner Felix Beda has confirmed he sold his sprinting standout, Nebr. Harvest, to E.C. Cashman late in the Ak-Sar-Ben meeting.

Beda refused to disclose the purchase price but reliable sources placed the value at between $20,000 and $25,000.

Nebr. Harvest was one of the state's foremost homebred sprinters. He has won numerous sprints at all Nebraska tracks. He won the Capital City Handicap last year at the State Fairgrounds.

Aunt Priscilla Wins Again

For the second straight day, I won 60 cents and I was so excited seeing Shoudabe Hasty win ($4.60) Saturday's feature, I started yelling.

Now, really, that wasn't very dignified of me. But at least I was stating my own opinion in the open and wasn't hiding my true feelings.

Anyway, despite Big Barry Brien trying so hard (he ran second), my winnings Saturday boosted my $104 spree fund to $115.80.

The Future of Baseball

Major League baseball recently did a study about participation by youths across the nation and it shows a healthy increase among the group nearing the age when they could turn professional.

Participation in all ages of summer programs increased five percent in 1974, but the senior age groups were up an impressive 13 percent.

The National Federation of State High School Associations did a separate survey which showed the number of boys taking part in interscholastic baseball reversed a slight downward trend and increased by nearly 38,000 through last September to 408,981.

Still another report, this by the American Amateur Baseball Congress, shows interest has never been greater than it has been thus far this summer and that team registrations are way up over last year. The estimate is that increases will run from 10 to 20 percent.

"It seems rather evident the general interest in baseball, which has seen more fans going to games and more businesses interested in getting involved, is carrying over to the youth of America," remarked baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "The already large youth programs are actually getting substantially larger. The more who do play the more the game will improve."

The report by the Major Leagues covered Little League, Boys Baseball, Babe Ruth, American Legion and the American Amateur Baseball Congress.

Those organizations reported a total registration of 87,885 teams in 1974, an increase of three percent over the 85,603 in 1973. The program directors estimated the number of players at 1,435,505 last year, an increase of 66,013 (five percent) over 1973.

Perhaps the most heartening statistics showed that programs for youths 16 and older, those who soon will be thinking about turning professional, had even larger gains. They had 13 percent more players and six percent more teams in 1974. The teams jumped to 8,535 with the individuals increasing to 174,520.

The study also showed that 14,680 high schools — an increase of nearly 11 percent — provided baseball competition as did 535 junior colleges and 958 four-year colleges. An estimated 446,835 players took part.

Interscholastic baseball participation took a slight drop from 1971 to 1973, the National Federation said, but its dramatic increase last year made baseball one of the fastest growing sports in its program.

The Amateur group said it expects its program to be the biggest in its 40-year history.

It adds up to a very pretty picture for baseball.

Odys and Ends

Tough debut: Don James, new football coach at Washington, will get a tough initiation into big-time football after moving from Kent State. The Huskies open against Arizona State in Tempe, play Texas in Seattle and then face Alabama in Birmingham three weeks later.

Oklahoma's football coaching staff payroll annually has reached $362,200. High is Barry Switzer at $30,000, low is Bill Shimek at $9,200... The Sooners, incidentally, became the second team on probation to win the mythical national championship last season. The other was Auburn in 1957.

The "New" World Football League is experimenting with uniform colors. Linebackers will dress in red pants, running backs in green pants, receivers in orange pants, defensive backs in yellow, offensive linemen in white and defensive linemen in black... Color-blind fans will just have to stay at home.

Nebraska football crowds have ranked third in the nation ever since Memorial Stadium was expanded to over 76,000 seats. The Huskers likely will drop to fourth when Tennessee's 9,000-seat addition is completed, boosting capacity to 86,250.

Miami's Hurricanes aren't a big draw in that Florida resort city. Last year, the Hurricanes drew only 127,066 for six games in the Orange Bowl — an average of just 21,175. Alabama drew only 25,265 late in the season in Miami.

Pete Elliott, former NU coach and now Miami athletic director, points out the Hurricanes draw well in odd numbered years because they play host to Notre Dame and state rival Florida. Other games there this year include Oklahoma, Colorado, Houston and Navy.

Rangers Trip Red Sox, 6-0

By United Press International

Dave Moates, put into the lead-off spot as the first managerial move by Frank Lucchesi, slashed his first major league homer in the first inning Monday night to spur the Texas Rangers to a 6-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Ferguson Jenkins, 12-10, hurled the shutout for Texas, allowing four hits and walking two. Luis Tiant, 13-9 took the loss.

In other AL action, Minnesota shut out New York 3-0, Milwaukee downed Chicago 7-4, Kansas City shaded Detroit 3-2, Cleveland edged California 2-1 in 11 innings, and Baltimore defeated Oakland 6-2.

The Twins gave Bert Blyleven a first inning run and he responded with a four-hitter, blanking the Yankees. Blyleven, 8-4, recorded his first victory in 10 days and his first shutout of the year. He struck out five and walked one, an intentional pass.

Pat Dobson, 9-10, took the loss.

Hank Aaron smacked a bases-loaded two-run single in the third inning and Bobby Darwin belted a three-run pinch-homer in the eighth to clinch a victory for the Brewers over the White Sox. Jim Colborn got his fifth win against eight losses.

John Mayberry hit his 19th and 20th homers of the season — his 10th and 11th of the month — to drive in all three runs in a Kansas City victory over the Tigers that snapped a six-game Royals losing streak.

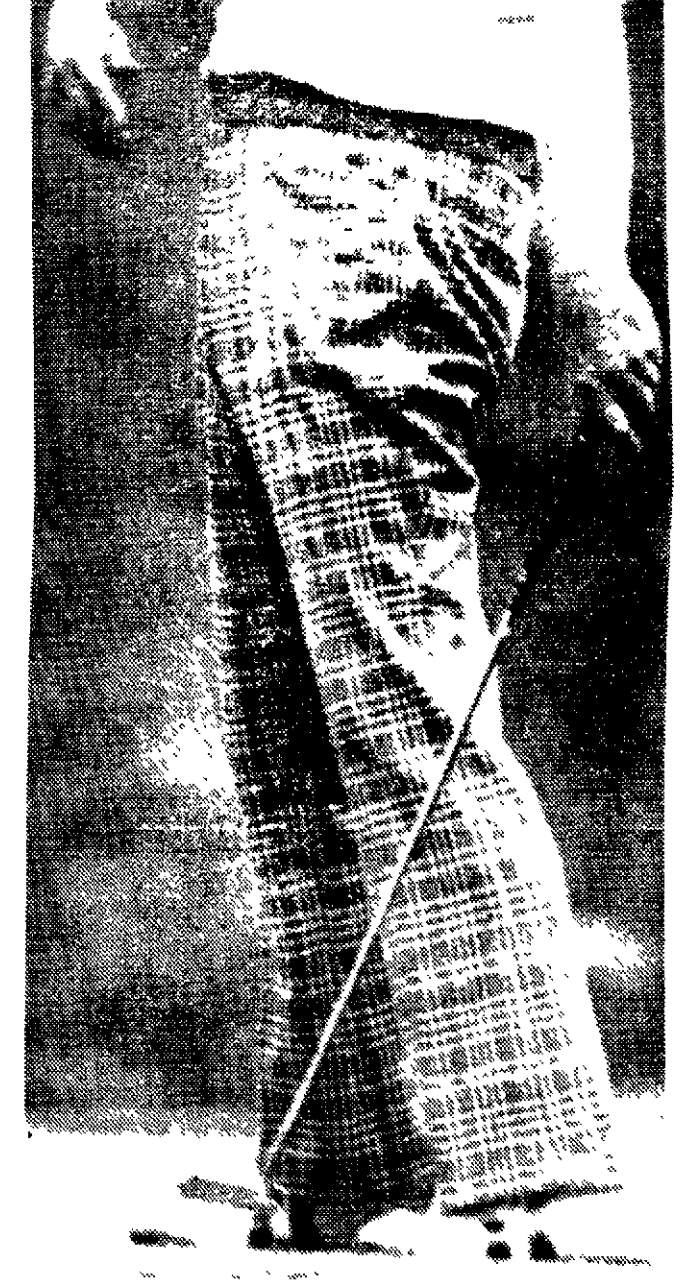

Rookie Dennis Leonard pitched a seven-hitter for 3 2-3 innings to raise his record to 6-5.

Oscar Gamble homered leading off the 10th inning to give the Indians a victory over the Angels. Fritz Peterson, making his first start since he injured the fingers on his throwing hand a month ago, allowed only five hits over the first seven innings.

In early National League night action, Cincinnati belted Philadelphia 10-4, Atlanta beat Montreal 4-1 and Houston turned back New York 6-2.

Tony Perez triggered a five-run second inning with a double and capped it with a run batted in as the Reds, behind George Foster's three RBI, routed Philadelphia. Vic Correll drilled a game-tying double in the eighth inning, then scored on pinch-hitter Dusty Baker's single that helped the Braves beat Montreal.

Ken Forsch stopped New York on 11 hits and Wilbur Howard collected two singles and a double Monday night as Houston beat the Mets. Forsch was helped by the Mets' Joe Torre, who set a National League record and tied a major league mark by grounding into four double plays.

Quarterback Bailey Not 'Eligible' For Wildcats

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Sophomore Arthur Bailey, who had been considered for starting quarterback this fall, was dropped Monday from the Kansas State football squad, Head Coach Ellis Rainsberger said.

"Arthur has not fulfilled certain requirements to Kansas State University and its athletic department. Therefore he will not be with the football team in the fall," Rainsberger said.

Bailey, from Montgomery Ala., suffered serious injuries in a fall from a Manhattan construction project earlier this summer and it was first feared he might be permanently paralyzed.

He was said to be recovering from the injuries, and doctors and university officials expressed hope he would be able to play football again—possibly this fall.

A K-State spokesman said the main concern over Bailey seemed to be his academic standing. Bailey was described as "doubtful scholastically" by the spokesman, who said he had been taking summer classes to try and improve his grade standing.

Bailey, who started three games for the Wildcats a year ago when regular quarterback Steve Grogan was hurt, was one of four candidates being considered as starting quarterback in 1975.

Bailey came to Kansas State in the fall of 1973 but was awarded an additional year of eligibility by the Big Eight Conference after breaking an arm in preseason drills and sitting out classes for a semester.

"There are some required commitments for student athletes and Arthur simply has not met them," Rainsberger's statement concluded.

Rangers Fire Martin, Lucchesi Named Replacement

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — A red-eyed, sleepless Billy Martin, known as baseball's street fighter, announced Monday that he had been fired as manager of the Texas Rangers, the third club to dispose of him because of his wrangling with management.

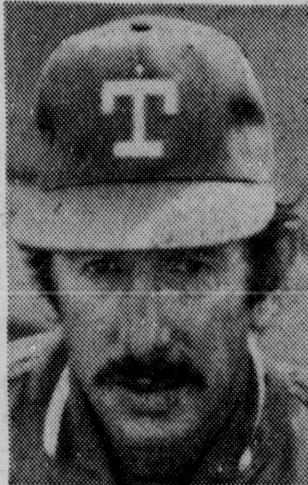

The announcement preceded by two hours a news conference at which majority owner Brad Corbett confirmed the decision. Also fired were pitching coach Art Fowler and assistant Charlie Silveira.

"I recognize this will cause a trauma with the fans... the fan reaction will be tough," Corbett said.

"As a student of the game, Billy was one of the finest," Corbett said, "but there are causes for his firing beyond his won-loss record. There was no particular one thing."

Martin, who said he hadn't slept in 48 hours, cleaned out his locker Monday night before the Rangers met the Boston Red Sox at Arlington Stadium.

"I've been fired, and my top assistant Frank Lucchesi is my replacement," Martin said.

Corbett said Lucchesi, who managed Philadelphia in the National League for three years, would fill Martin's spot for the remainder of the 1975 campaign.

"What sometimes works for veteran players does not work for young players," Corbett said. "Sometimes a manager gets too much credit when he wins and too much criticism when he loses. Billy certainly made a contribution to this franchise."

Asked if he felt Martin had been disloyal to the ball club in his tirades against management decisions, Corbett said, "I would not care to comment on that. It would not be appropriate."

Martin said the last straw in the decision to fire him was a dispute with Corbett over the acquisition of newly released catcher Tom Egan.

"He (Corbett) wants to call the shots," said Martin. "... One year in baseball and all of a sudden he's a genius."

It was the third firing of Martin's managing career. He had been let go by the Detroit Tigers in September, 1973, and by the Minnesota Twins in October, 1969.

"People want a 'yes' man, somebody who says 'yes, sir.' Well, you can't win doing it that way," said Martin.

The Rangers weren't winning, anyway. At the time of Martin's departure, the club owned a listless 44-51 record, 15½ games behind the American League West Division-leading Oakland A's.

"It had become like a country club down here... a social club... I couldn't keep control of my players," said Martin.

Neither could he control Corbett, whom he says engineered the deal that sent outfielder Willie Davis to the St. Louis Cardinals. "The Willie Davis deal... was his. I bargained against it."

Martin spoke as he cleaned out his locker at Arlington Stadium. Then assistant Charles Silveira walked into former Rangers manager's office and said, "They got me, too."

Martin rose and shook hands with Silveira, saying, "I'm sorry I couldn't save you."

Then he continued, "Corbett accused me of one thing—lack of loyalty... One thing, I'm not got to stand up for his convictions.

"I'm happy about one thing. I brought Texas a winner... I brought Texas a million fans... and Texas finally got to see some baseball."

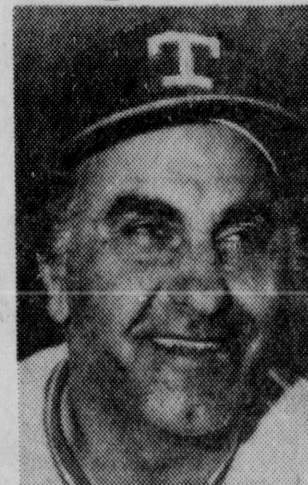

The year to which Martin referred was last season, when he guided the Rangers to an 84-76 record and second place in AL West, five games behind the A's. The club attracted an alltime high 1,193,902 fans to the stadium Martin left on Monday.

"I don't think I can come back into baseball, but of course I'm saying that right now without any sleep in two days," said Martin.

He said his immediate plans were to remain in the Arlington area with his wife Gretchen and their son.

"I have a home in Arlington, but the Rangers own it," he said, laughing. "I hope they don't take that away from me."

The 49-year-old Lucchesi managed the Philadelphia Phillies in 1970 and 1971 before being released on July 10, 1972. He guided the Cleveland Indians' American Association franchise, the Oklahoma City Oaks, to a third-place finish in 1973 before joining the Rangers as third-base coach in 1974.

Martin's firing Monday was similar to his releases from the Twins and Tigers.

In 1969, when Minnesota owner Calvin Griffith announced Martin's firing, he said, "Prior to hiring him, realizing his explosive personality... I had numerous meetings with him to set policy and guide lines. I feel he... completely ignored our understandings.

"Billy is popular to a certain degree. You know Billy can go into a crowd and charm the hell out of you. But he ignored me," said Griffith.

During Martin's stormy reign with the Twins, he had a much-publicized punchout with pitcher Dave Boswell after Boswell had kicked and slugged outfielder Bob Allison.

Just over four years later, General Manager Jim Campbell of the Detroit Tigers announced Martin's firing "for the good of our organization." It came just three days after Martin had ordered his pitchers to throw spitballs in protest to Perry's illegal pitch.

Martin, reacting with his characteristic fire, said "They did what they think was right and I did what I think was right."

"That's Billy," said pitcher Joe Coleman, one of the hurlers whom Martin had told to throw illegally. "He tries to fire us up by doing something and that was his way of firing us up."

Stakes. That completed a fine Fonner meet when he won twice and finished second twice in four outings.

Although he failed to win at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha, Mount Air appears to be the horse to catch in Tuesday's $3,500 Kernal Stakes at the State Fairgrounds.

Ten 2-year-olds are set to compete in the 4-furlong race that has attracted two entries.

Top-weighted at 122 pounds under the allowance stakes conditions, Mount Air started three times in Omaha after his successful Grand Island start.

He faded to seventh in an allowance chase over five furlongs after leading much of the race on June 7. Then he finished fifth in the $20,000-added Laddie Stakes over 5½ furlongs on June 17.

However, he ran what might have been his best race ever when he placed second to Bold Lightning in the $33,400 Ak-Sar-Ben Futurity over 6 furlongs on June 27.

In that race, he defeated Flying Shoulda (who breezed to an easy seven-length win in last Friday's Tassel Stakes here) and Get Up Chuck, who won the Laddie Stakes.

Overall, Mount Air has two wins and three seconds in seven outings this season for earnings of $20,287.

He will ridden by Lincoln's leading rider, Terry Barnes.

Perhaps the strongest challenges may come from Blue's Gray and Bar Host.

Blue's Gray, owned by Victor Glick, won an allowance race here last Tuesday over six furlongs and broke his maiden at Ak-Sar-Ben. He will be ridden by Tom Greer.

H. E. Clay and S. H. Struck's Bar Host, broke his maiden at Ak-Sar-Ben and then won a claiming race over 4½-furlongs on May 20. His stablemate, Swoon's World, is on the also-eligible list.

Other entrants, their weights and riders, if named include Vincent Brewer's Full Circuit (114 and Doug Schoepf); Ralph Armstrong's Mr. L.E.A. (114); Lowell Stevens' Pachuto (114); Olin Miles' Space Treasurer (114); Harold Bower's Lucky O.W. (114 and Rodolfo Calderon); Janet Smith et al's Bold And Built (114 and Louis Duthie); Mrs. H. Synhorst's Red's Mighty Barb (114 and Fred Ecoffey). Also eligibles include F.W. Bemis' Kim's Lad (114 and Calderon) and a Dale Wolff entry of Quick Bart and Master Shad (each 112 and Barnes).

Rule 14 Applied To All Schools

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

For the first time, Nebraska's 900 small Class I school districts will have to meet standards for approval under "Rule 14," adopted Monday by the State Board of Education.

The first update of Rule 14 in a decade prescribes minimum standards for all schools, public and private, from kindergarten through 12th grade.

The set of requirements goes into effect Aug. 1.

To allay fears that elementary schools would be unable to meet the first-time standards and thus be forced to close, the board decided to allow them two years to comply.

Meanwhile, State Department of Education staff members pledged to work closely with the schools during 1975-76 to insure that they can make any necessary improvements in curriculum and facilities. Many of Nebraska's 1,240 districts will qualify immediately, and some will exceed the minimum requirements.

Proposals Amended
Board members agreed districts may apply for waivers to any of the rules in hardship cases. After months-long, statewide hearings on Rule 14, the board included some amendments to the original proposals.

One requires each elementary school to have a lavatory, drinking fountain, rest room and toilet inside the school building.

That prompted board Vice President Willard Waldo of DeWitt to point out that some rural districts in southeast and northwest Nebraska have low-grade or no water supplies. Thus, the schools may not wish to incur the expense to serve children.

That roused Marilyn Fowler of Lexington to wonder in astonishment how the state can rationalize ignoring lack of "sophisticated" indoor water facilities when U.S. Apollo astronauts have completed a flawless linkup with a Russian spaceship.

"I cannot feel we are such a backward state that we can sanction our children to be allowed to live in what is almost a primitive state," Mrs. Fowler said. She has earlier criticized Rule 14 for lack of enforcement provisions.

But Waldo retorted, "Maybe there's things more important to those (rural school) people than having running water."

"I can't accept that we are accepting (noncompliance with minimum facilities) without trying," Mrs. Fowler groused, again using that platform to attack what she has called an excessive and inefficient number of school districts.

Hugh Harlan of the Education Department said schools may use portable toilets, such as those designed for travel trailers, to comply with Rule 14.

Deny Approval
Harlan also noted that it the state board decides a school is "illegally constituted," the board has authority to close it down by denying approval for its official operation.

But board member Frank Landis of Lincoln said other school districts, under similar constraints, have continued to operate in open defiance of the withholding sanction.

Board On Handicapped Sought

Emphasizing parent power to help the Nebraska Department of Education, a delegation of five Omahans Monday asked the state board to set up a "State Advisory Committee for the Handicapped."

Instead of working against the state board via lawsuits, the Omahans said, they want to make the Nebraska special education law (LB403) work for every child who need it.

LB403 has stayed in the eye of a controversial storm since last November.

It has been through illegal operations, underfunding, attacks on the Legislature's intent to pay 90% of the excess costs of special education programs, improper payments of state funds, red tape to invent paperwork to process children, legal quagmires about what non-school agencies can be paid for LB403 program services, to name some of the bill's problems.

The Education Department has worked overtime to straighten out the problems in running the 1973 law, which went into effect last year.

Areas Defined
State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson released on Monday an LB403 performance audit which determined "five major problem areas" affecting the law's workability.

—Lack of communication between the Education Department and school districts.

—Districts' concern about lack of reimbursement for original approved budgets.

—The state attorney general's opinion stating that contracts with private institutions are illegal.

—Redefinition of "Rule 51" (LB403 operating regulations).

—The ability of the Education Department and school districts to clarify language in Rule 51.

The audit, signed by systems analyst C. R. Patteson, concluded that the duty of every local school board to provide or contract for needed LB403 programs "is not being fully accomplished at this time."

The Education Department, the audit recommended, should re-define definitions used on LB403 reimbursement forms, request audit guidelines to distribute state LB403 funds, request new law to require school districts to file audits with the state, consider a common fiscal year for all districts and complete the updating of LB403 accounting systems.

Education Commissioner Anne Campbell said only the first recommendation has been accomplished.

One of the Omaha parents, Joan Searcy, questioned the attorney general's opinion that it's unconstitutional for districts to contract for LB403 services with private schools.

"Your first obligation is to the child," every school child under the constitution, she said.

"Could you be in trouble if you actually upheld the law as it states," and defied the state attorney's opinion? She asked.

"Other public funds are being contracted with private organizations," she charged.

Backed by about 15 parents in the audience from across Nebraska, the delegation also requested further public hearings on Rule 51, to design needed changes.

"The whole thing has really become kind of a political toy," said Karen Smull, who filed suit over the board's alleged non-compliance with LB403. That suit was dismissed.

Saying that many other parents are considering legal action, Mrs. Smull said she'd rather work with the board: "You're losing a whole other generation of children" by not meeting their learning disability needs now.

She cited "unrealistic" standards in Rule 51, such as requiring only three hours weekly work with a mildly handicapped child, and allowing too

The biggest club the board has, Landis said, is that denying state approval will result in a school losing its proportionate share of state aid and payments from the State Board of Educational Lands and Funds.

Mrs. Fowler said some districts "aren't going to pay much attention to it," because they receive so little. Landis said county school superintendents will be the "main ones who apply these standards," backed up by Education Department accreditation inspectors.

Harlan was optimistic, noting comparatively few objections to the massive Rule 14 document, covering everything from class size and teacher competence to the number and kind of library books. "I'm confident this rule is going to give us the opportunity to reinforce cooperation" with all schools and produce uniform improvements in instruction, he said.

Waldo called Rule 14 "one of the most valuable things the Department of Education has done, in my memory."

Board members also discussed the Rule 14 ban on scheduled, competitive athletic contests between schools from kindergarten through 6th grade. The provision doesn't prohibit informal athletic activity days; rather, it's designed to stop small schools from putting a 6th-grader, for example, on a junior high team short in numbers.

Mrs. Fowler said the board should promote individual sports in physical education through 6th-grade, rather than rushing them into competitiveness that requires maturity.

In a precedent-setting move, the board decided that a local district is eligible for a share of LB403 state funds if it contracts with another school district, even though both provide similar programs. However, both districts must mutually agree.

The action came after a lawsuit alleging that an Omaha Public School handicapped student was served better after choosing to transfer to Omaha's District 66. The board noted its action doesn't obligate school districts to transfer students in such situations.

Board members also approved criteria for learning disability programs, including placement guidelines. And they voted to continue $93,127 in grants for the Meyer Children's Rehabilitation Institute and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln for diagnostic work.

The Education Department's special education section will be enlarged from 16 to 23 staff members plus two more clerical employees to handle increased state and federal programs and monitoring.

Sewer Fees Hiked By Beatrice Council

Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Beatrice—Increases in sewer use fees were approved Monday night by the City Council, but a vote by mayor Bob Sargent was required to swing the measure.

The proposal, raising rates an average of 11 to 17%, drew only a 5-2 vote when a rule suspension was called for. With a three-fourths vote required, City Attorney Steve Von Riesen ruled that a vote by the Mayor would be legal since it "would be decisive."

Noting that the hike would be the first in 10 years, Sargent okayed the rules suspension and the ordinance itself carried on a 5-2 vote. Councilmen Bill Johnson and Doug Probst registered opposition, claiming the change unfairly assesses minimum charges against every apartment unit.

However, another amendment carried making it optional for owners of multi-unit dwellings to pay either on a residential rate with individual minimums, or a commercial rate with one minimum. In either case, however, the total will be higher than at present.

On another matter, the council agreed to a Chamber of Commerce request to have inspection made of the downtown fire district as a preliminary to some possible condemnations. Sterling Kent, Chamber executive vice president, said this would provide a "starting base" for anticipated downtown development.

After discussion, the council agreed it already has sufficient authority to make fire and health inspections. The mayor warned, however, that "nobody's business will be torn down just to make the town look pretty."

The council also adopted a 1975-76 budget of $705,079. Departments heads were praised for helping to hold the levy for next year at 22.74 mills, the same as for this fiscal period.

"It's good to see that the line has been held during the six years which have seen the highest inflation in history," said the mayor. It was noted that the levy has declined from 27.52 mills in 1969-70.

Approved without dissent was a $9,266 bid for a traffic signal at 19th and Lincoln. Although Lincoln Elementary School patrons had urged a more sophisticated signal, they did not object when the lowest bid received on their requested unit was $20,868. The bid approved was that of OK Electric Company.

Rule 14 Applied To All Schools

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

For the first time, Nebraska's 900 small Class I school districts will have to meet standards for approval under "Rule 14," adopted Monday by the State Board of Education.

The first update of Rule 14 in a decade prescribes minimum standards for all schools, public and private, from kindergarten through 12th grade.

The set of requirements goes into effect Aug. 1.

To allay fears that elementary schools would be unable to meet the first-time standards and thus be forced to close, the board decided to allow them two years to comply.

Meanwhile, State Department of Education staff members pledged to work closely with the schools during 1975-76 to insure that they can make any necessary improvements in curriculum and facilities. Many of Nebraska's 1,240 districts will qualify immediately, and some will exceed the minimum requirements.

Proposals Amended
Board members agreed districts may apply for waivers to any of the rules in hardship cases. After months-long, Statewide hearings on Rule 14, the board included some amendments to the original proposals.

One requires each elementary school to have a lavatory, drinking fountain, rest room and toilet inside the school building.

That prompted board Vice President Willard Waldo of DeWitt to point out that some rural districts in southeast and northwest Nebraska have low-grade or no water supplies. Thus, the schools may not wish to incur the expense to serve children.

That roused Marilyn Fowler of Lexington to wonder in astonishment how the state can rationalize ignoring lack of "sophisticated" indoor water facilities when U.S. Apollo astronauts have completed a flawless linkup with a Russian spaceship.

"I cannot feel we are such a backward state that we can sanction our children to be allowed to live in what is almost a primitive state," Mrs. Fowler said. She has earlier criticized Rule 14 for lack of enforcement provisions.

But Waldo retorted, "Maybe there's things more important to those (rural school) people than having running water."

"I can't accept that we are accepting (noncompliance with minimum facilities) without trying," Mrs. Fowler groused, again using that platform to attack what she has called an excessive and inefficient number of school districts.

Hugh Harlan of the Education Department said schools may use portable toilets, such as those designed for travel trailers, to comply with Rule 14.

Deny Approval
Harlan also noted that if the state board decides a school is "illegally constituted," the board has authority to close it down by denying approval for its official operation.

But board member Frank Landis of Lincoln said other school districts, under similar constraints, have continued to operate in open defiance of the withholding sanction.

The biggest club the board has, Landis said, is that denying state approval will result in a school losing its proportionate share of state aid and payments from the State Board of Educational Lands and Funds.

Mrs. Fowler said the board should promote individual sports in physical education through 6th-grade, rather than rushing them into competitiveness that requires maturity.

Board On Handicapped Sought

Emphasizing parent power to help the Nebraska Department of Education, a delegation of five Omahans Monday asked the state board to set up a "State Advisory Committee for the Handicapped."

Instead of working against the state board via lawsuits, the Omahans said, they want to make the Nebraska special education law (LB403) work for every child who need it.

LB403 has stayed in the eye of a controversial storm since last November.

It has been through illegal operations, underfunding, attacks on the Legislature's intent to pay 90% of the excess costs of special education programs, improper payments of state funds, red tape to invent paperwork to process children, legal quagmires about what non-school agencies can be paid for LB403 program services, to name some of the bill's problems.

The Education Department has worked overtime to straighten out the problems in running the 1973 law, which went into effect last year.

Areas Defined
State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson released on Monday an LB403 performance audit which determined "five major problem areas" affecting the law's workability.

—Lack of communication between the Education Department and school districts.

—Districts' concern about lack of reimbursement for original approved budgets.

—The state attorney general's opinion stating that contracts with private institutions are illegal.

—Redefinition of "Rule 51" (LB403 operating regulations).

—The ability of the Education Department and school districts to clarify language in Rule 51.

The audit, signed by systems analyst C. R. Patteson, concluded that the duty of every local school board to provide or contract for needed LB403 programs "is not being fully accomplished at this time."

The Education Department, the audit recommended, should re-define definitions used on LB403 reimbursement forms, request audit guidelines to distribute state LB403 funds, request new law to require school districts to file audits with the state, consider a common fiscal year for all districts and complete the updating of LB403 accounting systems.

Education Commissioner Anne Campbell said only the first recommendation has been accomplished.

One of the Omaha parents, Joan Seary, questioned the attorney general's opinion that it's unconstitutional for districts to contract for LB403 services with private schools.

"Your first obligation is to the child," every school child under the constitution, she said.

"Could you be in trouble if you actually upheld the law as it states," and defied the state attorney's opinion? She asked.

"Other public funds are being contracted with private organizations," she charged.

Backed by about 15 parents in the audience from across Nebraska, the delegation also requested further public hearings on Rule 51, to design needed changes.

"The whole thing has really become kind of a political toy," said Karen Smull, who filed suit over the board's alleged non-compliance with LB403. That suit was dismissed.

Saying that many other parents are considering legal action, Mrs. Smull said she'd rather work with the board: "You're losing a whole other generation of children" by not meeting their learning disability needs now.

She cited "unrealistic" standards in Rule 51, such as requiring only three hours weekly work with a mildly handicapped child, and allowing too many students per teacher.

Dale Samuelson, Omaha Public Schools assistant superintendent in charge of special education, concurred that a parent-heavy advisory committee is necessary to work with the existing advisory group of educators.

Otherwise, he said, parents in local districts will cry "That's enough!" to the high costs of special education programs, and the backlash will affect local districts' ability to pay.

The board agreed to study the proposals.

In other action on LB403, the board authorized the $10.5 million final state payments to school districts for 1974-75, reimbursing 83% of their excess costs, or 7% less than stipulated in the law.

If reimbursing $276,000 for contracts with private schools which served 389 children is determined illegal, that will increase to 86%.

The board set Sept. 3 as the final date for districts to submit plans and budget for the 1976-77 special education programs. First-quarter payments are expected to be made on Sept. 30.

Special education forms which school districts must use during the coming school year were also approved, and the board okayed rates that qualified contracting agencies may charge for services.

In a precedent-setting move, the board decided that a local district is eligible for a share of LB403 state funds if it contracts with another school district, even though both provide similar programs. However, both districts must mutually agree.

The action came after a lawsuit alleging that an Omaha Public School handicapped student was served better after choosing to transfer to Omaha's District 66. The board noted its action doesn't obligate school districts to transfer students in such situations.

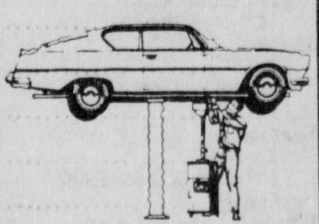

Board members also approved criteria for learning disability programs, including placement guidelines. And they voted to continue $93,127 in grants for the Meyer Children's Rehabilitation Institute and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln for diagnostic work.

The Education Department's special education section will be enlarged from 16 to 23 staff members plus two more clerical employees to handle increased state and federal programs and monitoring.

The board also approved hiring Beth B. Buehlmann as executive assistant to the Nebraska Education Commissioner, at a $17,028 annual salary.

Sewer Fees Hiked By Beatrice Council

By DEAN TERRILL

Southeast Nebraska Bureau Beatrice—Increases in sewer use fees were approved Monday night by the City Council, but a vote by mayor Bob Sargent was required to swing the measure.

The proposal, raising rates an average of 11 to 17%, drew only a 5-2 vote when a rule suspension was called for. With a three-fourths vote required, City Attorney Steve Von Riesen ruled that a vote by the Mayor would be legal since it "would be decisive."

Noting that the hike would be the first in 10 years, Sargent okayed the rules suspension and the ordinance itself carried on a 5-2 vote. Councilmen Bill Johnson and Doug Probst registered opposition, claiming the change unfairly assesses minimum charges against every apartment unit.

However, another amendment carried making it optional for owners of multi-unit dwellings to pay either on a residential rate with individual minimums, or a commercial rate with one minimum. In either case, however, the total will be higher than at present.

On another matter, the council agreed to a Chamber of Commerce request to have inspections made of the downtown fire district as a preliminary to some possible condemnations. Sterling Kent, Chamber executive vice president, said this would provide a "starting base" for anticipated downtown development.

After discussion, the council agreed it already has sufficient authority to make fire and health inspections. The mayor warned, however, that "nobody's business will be torn down just to make the town look pretty." The council also adopted a 1975-76 budget of $705,079. Departments heads were praised for helping to hold the levy for next year at 22.74 mills, the same as for this fiscal period.

"It's good to see that the line has been held during the six years which have seen the highest inflation in history," said the mayor. It was noted that the levy has declined from 27.52 mills in 1969-70.

Approved without dissent was a $9,266 bid for a traffic signal at 19th and Lincoln. Although Lincoln Elementary School patrons had urged a more sophisticated signal, they did not object when the lowest bid received on their requested unit was $20,888. The bid approved was that of OK Electric Company.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Tuesday

Quote from a former lightweight boxing champion: 'Omarr predicts the fights on the nose. He is great!' Quote from a famous astrologer: 'Omarr is a real expert. He is erudite and an expert in his field.' Quote from a professor of astronomy: 'Omarr is a general, leading an army of the superstitious.'

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be pulled in two directions simultaneously. Key is to maintain balance, to build on solid base to be aware of security and potential. Pisces. Virgo could be in picture. Remember diet resolutions. Avoid unnecessary extravagance. Someone at top takes a liking to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are in better position to organize than has been in recent past. Money or cash flow makes comeback. Messages could go astray, but overall picture is bright - if you accept added responsibility. Older individual backs you at special meeting or private conference.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Study Taurus message for meaningful hint. Money that is handled by special accountant, mate or partner figures in picture. You need "permission" before making certain commitments. Finish assignment. Avoid premature starts. Get well-rounded picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Pace slows despite new contacts, opportunities. Key is to realize that you are carrying heavier burden. One close to you makes some demands, requests. If creative, you do what must be done and you do it with aplomb. If you insist on being ultraorthodox, you retrace steps.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What was an emotional bruise is going through healing process. You're "getting better" whether or not you are aware of it. A signal to that effect will be received. Aquarian might be in picture. Accent is on teaching, intuition and basic issues, including health.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Forces tend to be scattered. You have some difficulty drawing bead on main objective. Key is to be versatile, to work with material at hand to enjoy respite from details and routine. You have chance for emotional recharge, to be refreshed and to get a "new lease."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) What might appear a setback is more properly defined as a delay. Know it and avoid panic. Check details, read between the lines. Become familiar with the points. Accent is on security specific persons who work hard even though they lack brilliance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Neighbors, relatives may seem preoccupied. Don't force issues. Agree to changes without giving up principles. Dialogue is opened on what appears to be a "lightweight" subject. However, before it is finished, there are "hot-and-heavy" implications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Special costs, budget in general could be considered a prime target by those who would take advantage. Know it and act accordingly. You can deal from position of strength despite outward appearances. You'll understand!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Be sure others are handling their share of the responsibility. Otherwise, you might be considered a prime target by those who would take advantage. Know it and act accordingly. You can deal from position of strength despite outward appearances. You'll understand!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Don't get caught in middle of dispute among friends. Maintain neutral stance. What seems permanent could be entering its final phase. Know it and prepare accordingly. Don't be intimidated by one who is actually a "paper tiger."

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, rebellious, were on your own early, perhaps due to loss of one of your parents. November will be a significant month. Domestic adjustment, possible change of residence is featured this year. Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. If single, marriage may be on horizon.
